Henry Ford on Money
15 Trillion Years More
The Complicated Tariff

—By Arthur Brisbane—

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 21—Beautiful weather, fine air from the north, filling lungs and blood with vigor, in this city. If there were more jobs, and more money in general circulation, no one would complain of anything. However, the pause is only temporary, as anybody but a goose might know.

This city represents man's ability and intention to move rapidly, his freedom from the hampering law of gravitation.

As long as men are in a hurry this city will continue to grow, and Americans will be in a hurry as long as America lasts. No passing depression can check the growth of Detroit in population, wealth or usefulness.

The automobile industry does not propose to stand still merely because things are temporarily dull. Chief Engineer Charles F. Kettering of General Motors, William S. Knudsen, head of Chevrolet, are both in Europe, studying automobile exhibitions, looking for any new ideas and improvements.

Henry Ford, broadcasting Wednesday night, said:

"The next big job now is to improve the money system. The money question is coming to the front just as certain as can be. Congress has farmed out the national money system into private hands. Congress should take back control of the money system and run it as a public business. Our money system is altogether antiquated."

Mr. Ford expresses the thought of many when he says, "Our money system is antiquated."

The question is, what substitute can you get for the present system? We cannot accept the British suggestion and adopt a "sterling system" based on notes of the Bank of England. There is too much paper in the world.

We cannot have, needless to say, unrestricted printing of greenbacks, but, as Senator Borah has suggested, our gold reserve would easily justify printing a couple of billions more currency. No danger of inflation, it would be sopped up like a brief shower on a hot summer day.

Apparently men must have something that they can call "real" money. With us, it's gold. In China, and with three-quarters of the people on earth, it is silver.

Shells are used for money among savages.

This country, with wealth incalculable, complaining that it has "too much of everything," even too much money stored away where the people cannot get it, with ten or twelve millions idle, certainly needs some new money idea. But who will produce the idea?

Great Britain, having abandoned the gold standard, because it could not do otherwise, would persuade the world to give up the gold standard and accept instead a "sterling standard."

The fox in the fable, when his tail was cut off, urged all other foxes to cut their tails off also. They refused.

Astronomers and mathematicians, physicists, geologists and chemists are encouraging. A great authority, Jeans, tells you in his "The Universe Around Us" that our sun loses in weight every minute 250,000,000 tons, fifteen thousand million tons every hour.

You worry about that, wondering how long the world will last. Along comes Dr. MacMillan, who teaches astronomy at the University of Chicago. He says the sun has resources sufficient to make it last fifteen trillion years longer, and it absorbs fresh material as it rolls through space.

It is hard for us to understand what a million means, much less a billion or a trillion. Fifteen trillion years means fifteen thousand times one billion years.

The human race, only 12,000 years away from the Stone Age, already flies, dives under the sea, has conquered slavery, cannibalism, and the problems of production. It should do remarkable things, with fifteen trillions of years to go.

No man has ever lived with imagination enough to suggest one millionth part of the wonders that the human intellect will accomplish in the next fifteen million years, to say nothing of fifteen trillions of years.

Complicated is the tariff question. Here in Detroit some automobile men say, "Our high tariff has injured the automobile business."

Farther down the lakes, in Buffalo, the General Electric Co. lamp works closes its plants, which formerly employed 600 men, declaring, through its manager, Mr. Poag, that Germany and Japan are shipping in goods made by foreign labor so cheap that American manufacturers cannot compete.

In this country, according to testimony in Washington, the

STATE ST. ODDS 5 TO 1 ON ROOSEVELT

Odds on Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt to win the presidential sweepstakes over Herbert Hoover soared to 5 to 1 on State st. today in the placing of wagers from $50 to $300, while an offer of a $1000 bet on Roosevelt at 3 to 1 lured no Hoover taker. The New York odds are 2½ to 1, and on the West coast they are 2 to 1.

BOSTON YOUTH CONFESSES 11 BREAKS

Tampa, Fla., Oct. 21 (INS)—Grilled by police, a youth who gave his name as William Stafford of Boston today confessed to 11 robberies in 20 days. He returned the loot and gave a list of houses robbed.

Here's a Woman That Really Had Election Officers in Air

—By WIN BROOKS—

It was quite surprising. Mr. Peter Tague said so himself, admitting he hasn't yet recovered from the experience. And anybody who knows Mr. Peter Tague realizes that when anything surprises him it must be of a very surprising nature, indeed.

Nothing, in fact, would have surprised the election commissioner more except a telegram from Mr. Hoover congratulating him upon his record registration of Boston voters, most of whom will vote for Mr. Roosevelt.

JUST WANTED TO VOTE

It seems there was a lady. She arrived at the election commissioner's office in City Hall on Wednesday afternoon when all Boston was trying to beat the dead-line on registration.

She wanted to register to vote, she said. She didn't speak very loudly to the clerk

"Mrs. Alice Gerrault," she whispered the name, and the address, "33 State st." It sounded like that, anyway.

"Your home address, I mean," said the registration clerk.

"That's my home address."

"You mean you live at 33 State st.?"

That's what she meant.

"But, madam," expostulated the clerk after consulting his listings," you can't live there. That's a steamship office."

"Young man," she said with an electric ice box (frigid air to the sophisticated) "Young man, 33 State st. is my home and it's not a steamship line. Do I look like a stowaway? If you think

ROOSEVELT TELLS FARM AID DETAILS

State Arsenal, Springfield, Ill., Oct. 21—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic presidential nominee, today pledged himself, if elected, to inaugurate immediately a definite program to "stop the ruthless foreclosures of farm mortgages" and to solve other farm aid problems.

Addressing a crowd of 10,000, Roosevelt charged the Hoover administration with permitting joint stock land banks to pursue a policy of "destructive selfishness" in foreclosing farm mortgages, which he declared was contrary to the spirit and purpose of the farm loan act.

The candidate was greeted by a cheering crowd on his arrival in the city. Party leaders joined in the welcome and participated in the big parade through the capital's flag bedecked streets.

Roosevelt's Smile of Victory at Indianapolis

After the welcoming parade Gov. Roosevelt went to Abraham Lincoln's tomb where he was greeted by Gov. Louis L. Emerson of Illinois, Republican, and Henry Horner, Democratic candidate for governor in a brief but impressive ceremony.

"I am glad to come here to the tomb of the Immortal Lincoln to renew the inspiration I have always taken from our great President," Gov. Roosevelt said.

The Democratic presidential nominee went into the tomb, and with due solemnity, stood several minutes before the sarcophagus. He

A drive against all underworld characters known or suspected to be engaged in illicit operations was launched today by Boston police in the investigation of the kidnapping of Herman "Hi" Rutstein of Dorchester.

The drive was ordered by Police Commissioner Hultman after five more suspects in the kidnaping were viewed at police headquarters by Rutstein and James F. "Owrey" O'Neil, Charlestown druggist, both of whom failed to identify the quintet.

Following the failure to identify any of them, the five men, William Gillar, Leo Leonard and David Goodman, all of Chelsea; Michael J. "Spike" Hennessey of Roxbury and Abraham Cohen of Everett, were questioned again by police and then released.

Hennessey left police headquarters, declaring that he feared he would be "bumped off."

ADDISON CAR FOUND

Commissioner Hultman's order to all division captains for a complete check of underworld characters and youths and men not employed, but showing signs of affluence, is a direct result of the finding of an automobile in a Roxbury garage, where it had been all during a police search for the machine.

The car is registered, according to police, to Michael D. Addison of Codman Hill ave., a brother of Walter Addison, arrested with William Harmon of New York and Max Schecter, alias Joseph "Gorilla" Gould, and identified by Rutstein as members of the kidnap band.

Police did not know that Michael D. Addison had a car until it was found and in the drive ordered today will list all cars used by underworld characters.

SOLDIERS ARE ARMED TO TEETH AT KINGSTON

EXCLUSIVE!

Intermittent rioting has been going on for the past week in the Portsmouth penitentiary at Kingston, Ont. Little news has seeped into the outside world of what has been going on behind the prison walls, although it is known that there has been a great deal of shooting. Gordon Sinclair, a special correspondent of International News Service, managed to make his way into the prison and tells here what he found.

Kingston, Ont., Oct. 21 (INS)—I was inside Portsmouth Penitentiary today.

Tired, unshaven troops in steel helmets and field kits loll around the triple-barred admission hall to the penitentiary, smoking innumerable cigarettes. The floor is littered with damp butts. And there are large tins of fresh smokes scattered among the thick boxes of ammunition and bulleye flashlights on desks. Other boxes containing fresh bombs are piled on the damp floor.

CELLS ARE WRECKED

Guards, alert and rather nervous, carry on their regular duties, with artillerymen as bodyguards. The place is dirty and smells strongly of disinfectant, since there are no prisoners—not even trusties—at clean-up duty.

From time to time, mournful howls and defiant yahoos echo up from unseen depths, where several hundred hungry prisoners have been locked up since yesterday afternoon. These prison-

DR. RICHARDSON DIES AT 91

Dr. William L. Richardson, one of Boston's far famed physicians, is dead today at his home in Commonwealth ave., Back Bay, at the age of 91 years.

The doctor, for whom Richardson House of Massachusetts General Hospital was named, was for 50 years closely connected with the Lying-In Hospital, and for many years served as its president, retiring in 1922.

At that time the trustees hailed him as the saviour of many mothers and children in his work for Boston's first maternity hospital.

Dr. Richardson, who received his education at Harvard, was dean of its Medical School and an Overseer of the college.

In 1867, he was married to Olivia L. Atchison of Portland, who died several years ago. Miss Gertrude R. White of Clarendon st., a niece is his only survivor.

SLAYER NOBLE UNDER KNIFE

Russell B. Noble, under life sentence in state prison for the murder in Haverhill of Mrs. Clara E. C. Ellis, today was in serious condition at the prison hospital, following an operation.

Noble was operated upon yesterday by Dr. Richard H. Miller, Back Bay specialist, the Boston Evening American learned.

He had been in good health, prison officers said, until he was stricken with hernia while at work yesterday morning.

At the prison hospital Noble's condition was pronounced "fairly good, considering the first day after the operation."

The blonde youth, who became a "hammer slayer" while still in high school, suffered excruciating pain until the knife of Dr. Miller relieved his condition.

Before he was stricken he worked quietly with his prison mates in the same indifferent manner that marked his arrest, trial and his confession of guilt that saved him from the chair, but marked him a "lifer."

His stay in the hospital will probably be of three weeks, unless complications set in. He may then be put on light work until his recovery is complete.

Young Noble started his life sentence May 26, 1931.

Mrs. Ellis, a wealthy widow, met death in March, 1931, when she awoke to find young Noble rummaging through her valuables.

Noble afterward told police he killed Mrs. Ellis with a hammer so "she couldn't squeal and disgrace him."

WOMEN BOOST JEWISH FUND

Women's division day at the daily meeting of the workers in the Associated Jewish Philanthropies Drive today swelled the sum collected by $12,419. A total of $283,816 toward the goal of $600,000 has been reached.

Mrs. Hyman Frieman, chairman of the women's division, who presided, announced receipt of an anonymous check, one of which had come ecah year for several years. This year it has been increased from $200 to $1000.

Speakers at today's luncheon included Mrs. Edgar M. Andrews, member of the Governor's Council; Mrs. Vivian Pomeroy of Milton, former British Parliament member for the Labor Party, and Miss Frances Stern, head of the food clinic of the Boston Dispensary. About 150 women attended.

G. O. P. RELIES ON WOMEN, DRYS TO RE-ELECT HOOVER

HOPE PINNED ON BIG BUSINESS TO HELP OUT

Smith Adherents' Resentment In N. E. Expected to Insure Victory

By LOUIS SEIBOLD
Universal Service

New York, Oct. 21—Candidates and managers of the two rival political parties have a pretty clear ideas of the sources of support on which each is depending to win the presidential election.

Their respective lines of strategy in the final phase of the campaign, now in full swing, are designed to meet the problems which must be solved to get the 266 electoral votes which the successful candidate must show on election day.

In the order of their relative importance, the elements which will spell success or defeat are these:

REPUBLICAN HOPES

Republican: (1) Habit and tradition; (2) 90 per cent of the dry vote; (3) the benefits of the Republican protective tariff; (4) the natural aid of big business, which always supports Republican presidential candidates; (5) the bulk of the women vote which four years ago supported Hoover; (6) Democratic factional fights caused by religious issues which cost the Democratic party fight normally Democratic southern states in 1928 and provoked present resentment of Al Smith's adherents in the North.

DEMOCRATIC OFFSETS

Democratic: (1), the protest vote of millions of citizens brought to the bread line and unofficial dole by the economic depression; (2), the bulk of the wet vote, expected to approximate 75 per cent of the members of both parties disfavoring the Republican "straddle"; (3), resentment directed against President Hoover for his failure to provide correctives for prevailing distress; (4), the support of citizens who believe the Republican protective tariff has largely contributed to the economic depression; (5), confidence in the conversion of the women voters, who have been disillusioned by Hoover failures in social-welfare matters; (6), the natural trend away from the Republican party due to phycological reason.

FEAR OF REPRISALS

That fear of Democratic reprisals caused by an attack on the sacred Republican protective policy will hold international banking, manufacturing and retail merchant support in the Republican column, is claimed by the Hoover managers.

Almost complete of the support for Hoover, and the loss of comparatively few wet votes in his own party, is also looked for by the Republican high command.

Big business interests, including Hoover, foreign investment and speculative security agencies, are expected to stand by the "Grand Old Party" which has always been good to them.

Special attention paid to women voters, and a more complete system of organization in many sections of the country than has characterized Democratic activities in his direction, is another important source of Republican dependence.

N. E. RESENTMENT

The resentment of Smith adherents in the New England and Middle Atlantic States is expected by the Republicans to be reflected in the Democratic votes on election day.

The Democrats, of course, admit none of these claims. Every poll and survey has disclosed that there exists widespread resentment against the Hoover administration for mismanagement of economic conditions affecting the whole people.

The resentment directed against Mr. Hoover accentuated by widespread distress, is, in Democratic judgment, more important than all the other factors involved in the presidential contest.

The wet vote of the country, including at least one-third of normal Republican sympathizers, is expected to approximate 75 per cent of the total votes susceptible to this influence, and therefore Democratic.

HOOVER DRAFTS HOT REPLY TO ROOSEVELT

Mills and Fearon Assist With Information About N. Y. Finances

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, Oct. 21 (INS)—Nettled by Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt's charges of "fiscal mismanagement," President Hoover worked today on a speech which his advisers said would constitute a blistering reply to the Democratic candidate. It will be delivered tomorrow night in Detroit.

In preparation of the speech, Hoover has the assistance of Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills and State Senator George R. Fearon, Republican leader of the Senate in New York. Both are familiar with the finances of New York State, and have given the President a veritable arsenal of ammunition to use against the Roosevelt administration at Albany.

TOUR THROUGH OHIO

Fearon dictated a letter to Mills, charging that under Roosevelt's administration the state debt in New York had increased enormously, and that the state faces a deficit of $100,000,000 for the current fiscal year.

As for Governor Roosevelt's speech at Pittsburgh, where he particularly assailed the Hoover management of national finances, Secretary Mills said it was filled with "extraordinary inaccuracies and distortions."

Armed with this sort of ammunition, the President leaves Washington tonight for his third venture into the pivotal middle west.

Tomorrow morning he will make a half-hour stop in Charleston, W. Va., then carry his campaign into Ohio again. Monroe, Mich., 40 miles from Detroit, was added to the speaking itinerary at the last minute.

SPEECH IN DETROIT

Fourteen stops are planned in traversing Ohio. He will arrive in Detroit only a few minutes before he is scheduled to address a capacity audience in the Olympia Arena, where a year ago he spoke to the American Legion and forestalled a demand for immediate payment of the soldiers' bonus. This is scheduled for 8:30 p. m., E. S. T.

It is likely Mr. Hoover will refer to the bonus question in his speech. His advisers are urging him to draw his attention to his own stand on the issue and contrast it with what they considered Gov. Roosevelt's "straddle" at Pittsburgh.

Hoover Limits Naval Building Projects

Universal Service

Washington, Oct. 21—The Hoover administration, intent upon economies and still hoping for success of the Geneva disarmament conference, will recommend virtually no new naval construction to the December Congress.

It may possibly ask funds for one eight-inch gun cruiser, to cost about $17,000,000, and for several new destroyers.

That will represent the entire 1932-1933 naval construction program—except for the usual repairs on old ships.

GARNER HARRIES HOOVER ON '28 PROMISES

Challenges the President to Answer How Many Pledges Have Been Carried Out

Washington, Oct. 21 (INS) — Speaker Garner today awaited a reply to his challenge to President Hoover to tell the country why the promises he made in 1928 were not fulfilled.

The challenge was issued by the Speaker, in which he declared that Mr. Hoover "must answer on his record."

Garner contrasted statements made by Mr. Hoover in 1928 with conditions today.

Answering the Republican contention that the country cannot risk a change of administration now, Garner said:

"By a comparison of the records of 1928 and 1932, I find only one 1928 statement by Mr. Hoover in which his recent utterances still stand in part.

WOULD LIKE A CHANGE.

"This statement was made in Newark, in 1928, when he said: 'The measure of our national prosperity, of our stability, of our hope of further progress at this time, is the measure of what we may risk through a change in present policies.'

"Mr. Hoover, no doubt, would like to strike from that sentence 'today the reference to national prosperity.'

Setting out the President's statement that evils inherited from the war harass the country, Garner said the President placed the post-war period behind him in 1928.

"In the San Francisco speech of 1928, he said 'the outlook of the world today is for the greatest era of commercial expansion in history. The rest of the world will become better customers.'

LOOKING FOR ALIBI

"Again, in his speech of acceptance of that year, he very definitely put an end to the post-war period when he said: 'Our problems of the last seven years have been problems of reconstruction. Our problems of the future are problems of construction. They are problems of progress.'

"In that statement, Mr. Hoover positively placed the post-war period behind him, yet in his Cleveland speech he endeavors to resurrect it for alibi purposes."

He quoted from President Hoover's Madison Square Garden speech of four years ago, in which the President said:

"Prosperity is no idle expression. It is a job for every worker, a continuation of the policies of the Republican party is fundamentally necessary to the future advancement of this program and the building up of prosperity."

"No Democrat," Garner added, "promised, as Mr. Hoover did, on the very threshold of the present crisis, that measures had been taken to prevent such a happening."

BARNARD DEAN FOR ROOSEVELT

By VIRGINIA GILDERSLEEVE
(Dean of Barnard College, N. Y.)

New York, Oct. 21 (US)—In this presidential election I am supporting Governor Roosevelt because I believe that under his administration the country will receive intelligent and progressive leadership and a sound and well-planned administration; and also because I think the Republican party should be turned out of office.

Virginia Gildersleeve

Ignoring the essential fact that trade must be a reciprocal thing, a give-and-take, the Republicans have encouraged foreign customers to buy our goods, and foreign debtors to borrow our money, and then made it as difficult as possible for these customers and debtors to pay us.

The Republicans should be rebuked by defeat in this coming election.

Governor Roosevelt's record convinces me that he can lead us out of this valley of despair and restore America to its rightful place in the reconstruction of the world.

Roosevelt-Ely Rally in Medford Tonight

A Roosevelt-Ely rally will be held in the Lincoln junior high school hall Medford, tonight, under the auspices of the Massachusetts Italian - Democratic League, of which Vincent Brogna is chairman.

ELEO SEARS ON HOOVER WAGON

Barry Wood and Charley Devens, Harvard athletic stars, and Eleonora Sears, society sportswoman, today climbed on the Hoover bandwagon, the Republican State Committee announced.

The committee did not say whether any of the three would stump in the presidential campaign, but the announcement quoted statements from each.

"Their enthusiastic entrance into the contest was hailed by the committee as a demonstration of the appeal of President Hoover's fighting spirit to the youth of the nation," the committee said.

"With President Hoover winning the fight against depression yard by yard, I am very keen in seeing him stay on the field until victory has been assured."

The statement of Wood read:

"I sincerely hope Hoover will be re-elected and be given an opportunity to complete the task he so courageously won."

Miss Sears said:

"Though I am a strong believer in free trade, I think in the present state of unrest it would be safest to retain Hoover as President and I am going to vote for him."

Norris Dares Doak to Charge Perjury

Minneapolis, Oct. 21 (AP)—Sen Norris of Nebraska in an interview today invited Secretary of Labor Doak "to prosecute me for perjury if he believes I violated my oath when I filed my affidavit in the Nebraska senatorial primary in 1931."

Dowling, Ely to Speak Tonight

Eddie Dowling, stage and movie picture star, and head of the Stage and Screen Roosevelt Club, will come to Boston tonight to be a speaker at the rally and first annual convention of the Young Democrats of Massachusetts in Faneuil Hall.

Other speakers at tonight's Democratic rally, which precedes the convention, will be Gov. Ely and John H. Fahey, publisher of the Worcester Post.

Frank Reel, president of the Boston Club, will be temporary chairman of the convention, at which a platform will be adopted, including a plank calling for legislation in anticipation of repeal of the Volstead Act.

The Young Democrats state that they have organized to further the youth movement in the Democratic party. James Roosevelt, son of the Democratic nominee for President, is treasurer of the national organization, and Miss Eleanor Fahey of Bay State rd., Back Bay, daughter of the publisher, is a member of the local steering committee.

LONDON CROWD FLAYS ROYALTY

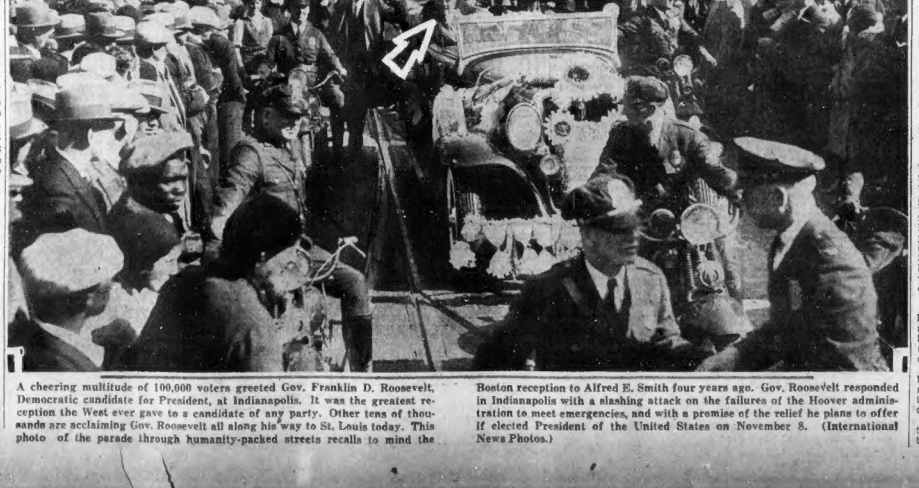

London, Oct. 21 (INS)—The menacing cry of "royal parasites" was heard today as police, amid a hail of stones and bottles, went into action in the East End to quell a new series of unemployment riots.

Disorders occurred at the arraignment of several persons arrested for creating a disturbance when Prince George opened a new wing of the Queen Victoria seamen's rest in the Poplar district yesterday.

Frequent clashes occurred as foot and mounted police strove to disperse hundreds of unemployed who gathered around the courthouse. One police inspector was badly injured.

While the crowd milled about, shouting, "We want bread, not batons," police who arrested those responsible for yesterday's disorder told of the sudden wave of anti-monarchist sentiment—almost unheard-of thing even in Britain's most trying times.

How the West Opens Its Heart to 'The Nation's Next President'

A cheering multitude of 100,000 voters greeted Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic candidate for President, at Indianapolis. It was the greatest reception the West ever gave to a candidate of any party. Other tens of thousands are acclaiming Gov. Roosevelt all along his way to St. Louis today. This photo of the parade through humanity-packed streets recalls to mind the Boston reception to Alfred E. Smith four years ago. Gov. Roosevelt responded in Indianapolis with a slashing attack on the failures of the Hoover administration to meet emergencies, and with a promise of the relief he plans to offer if elected President of the United States on November 8. ELECTION OFFICERS IN AIR

I look like a stowaway let me talk with the captain."

LONG WALK TO HOME

Mr. Tague was sent for. Mr. Tague was very busy but he always manages to find time to hear complaints. The problem was laid before him.

"I'm sorry, madam," he said," but there must be a mistake somewhere; 33 State st., Boston, is certainly an office building."

"Ah," said Mr. Tague. "It's not Boston?"

"No, indeed," she went on. "It's not Boston? It's Camden, N. J."

"Ah," said Mr. Tague. "Camden, New Jersey. You've just moved?"

"Oh, no," she said, "I moved from Boston two years ago. But you see I never voted in New Jersey so I came back especially to register. I made a special trip."

SHE WANTS MORE ACTION

One is from Mrs. Irving J. Hough who wants "more action and a little less talk" about Forgotten Men and suggests (a) that father leave the food left-overs on the Common on his way to work (b) that a tent be erected on the Common (c) that donations be given for food tickets for the men, and (d) that the "block plan" be given a trial.

"The large municipal buildings have nice warm cellars with sleepy janitors dozing in them," she writes. "Why not let the men on the Common sleep in them. Of course they couldn't sleep in the churches—the nice, warm, clean churches taking up so much space!

"Would God want dirty men in the churches?????"

THE CASH ROLLS IN

The second is a note from one of the Forgotten Men. he signs himself: "Leo Quinn, an ex-soldier. Address? Oh, just anywhere.

He writes: "Your Forgotten Men is the truth, all right. A garbage can is my dinner, eat all you want without using china. Chicken de hote (in part) or was it a la carte? Or alley cart?"

But the third I like best of all. It is a letter from Laura Cooke, of 1 Winter st., Arlington.

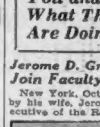

And in it is $5 for two of the Forgotten Men.

Jerome D. Greene Will Join Faculty in Wales

New York, Oct. 21—Accompanied by his wife, Jerome D. Greene, executive of the Rockefeller Foundation and a member of the banking firm of Lee, Higginson & Co., for the past 15 years, sailed for Europe today.

Jerome D. Greene

After a brief rest, Greene announced, that he will resume his new position as Woodrow Wilson Professor of International Politics in the University College of Wales, Aberystwyth, Wales.

Greta Garbo Will Live In Shack on Island

Paris, Oct. 21—Greta Garbo just can't stand being bothered by people especially newspapermen. And for that reason she intends to "rough it" alone in a small mountain shack, it was revealed today by friends.

Greta Garbo

When Greta says she intends to "rough it" she really means what she says from all accounts.

Friends declared that she informed them that she had rented the shack which is situated on the Island of Majorca in the Mediterranean.

Aimee and Husband in Agreement on Finances

Los Angeles, Oct. 21—A prenuptial agreement between them, dated Sept. 14, 1931, filed for record in the office of the county recorder yesterday, indicates that Aimee Semple McPherson has a clear cut understanding concerning her finances and her evangelistic work with her baritone soloist husband, David Hutton.

Aimee McPherson

The agreement provides that either might engage in any occupation he or she wished, that the funds of each should remain as separate property, that each should retain as his or her separate property whatever might be earned by each of the parties after marriage and that neither should inherit any of the other's estate after death, unless by special bequest in a will.

rag rug industry has been wiped out, grass and fibre rug industries are crippled, by importations from Japan.

A rug costing $5.60 to produce here is delivered in this country by Japaness for $3.50. American weavers get from $3 to $4.50 a day. Japanese workers get 15 to 26 cents a day.

Clarence Darrow announces his determination to save from the electric chair Russell McWilliams, only 18, who held up and murdered a motorman. Mr. Darrow says, "Even a life sentence would be an outrage, give the boy another chance."

It's a noble sentiment, but some will ask, "A chance to do WHAT? Not surely, a chance to kill another motorman, or a woman or a child."

When a man has committed one murder, society should make sure that he will never commit another.

But the state should not degrade itself by killing him. That is setting a bad example.

Two dead gangsters are picked up in Chicago, sent to a better world by fellow gangsters for the latter's good. Both were engaged in crime made profitable by prohibition, bootlegging, beer-running, hijacking. One, Samuel Delaney, only 19, helped to hijack a load of 150 sacks of sugar on its way to a still. He stole 30 sacks for himself, the other hijackers murdered him. Severe, quick "justice" among criminals.

France has a brand new idea. Premier Herriot feels that France should pay four hundred millions, "a commercial debt," for merchandise bought from this country.

The three thousand other millions, which the French borrowed from us and spent fighting, constitutes a "political debt," which should not be paid.

Uncle Sam must remember that nice distinction the next time anybody comes borrowing.

BABE, 37 YEARS MAN'S HELPER, PASSES ON

Equine Shades Give Place of Honor in Valhalla to Noted Boston American Horse

Into the green pastures, where horses go when their life of labor among men is over, a sleek and beloved white horse shyly nosed his way today, a newcomer to the Valhalla of horses.

"Just a minute. Your name and pedigree, that you may take your rightful place among us," called the keeper of the gate, a handsome Arabian steed of purest breed.

"My name? They called me 'Babe.' My pedigree? I know not when I was born nor who my parents were. I only know I spent my days in labor. For 21 years I was the willing and faithful slave of men. When I was too old to work, I was retired to a farm. I came here from Red Acre Farm, in Stowe, where I passed the last 14 years in a life of ease."

A BEWILDERED SHADE

"Just another work horse. Get over in the far corner of the field. And don't associate with those of nobler rank."

"Babe" looked around him. There was Phar Lap, the famous race horse who died last winter. Phar Lap looked at "Babe," looked at his dull eyes, his heavy body, his thick legs, and laughed.

On earth Babe was pretty well known.

In fact, in Boston, in the days when he drew a Boston Evening American delivery wagon in the days before auto trucks, he was the best known horse in the city.

AMONG THE NOBLES

"Why can I not go there," said Babe, pointing with his forelegs at a group of steeds who stood like statues in a field of clover.

"Those," said the keeper of the gate, "are the noblest horses among us. See that handsome white charger? He bore the great Alexander, conqueror of the world. Next th him is the horse Napoleon rode on his retreat from Moscow. That other is Sheridan's mount, who raced 20 miles with him to win a great battle. You're not in their class."

"Babe" looked at another group. Restless, high spirited.

"And who are they?" asked "babe."

"Those are the greatest race horses in history. Millions of dollars have been won and lost by our masters, men, on these horses. You can't associate with them."

Babe was getting mad.

"I can't associate with those of my kind who bore great men? I can't associate with those who spent their days in racing that foolish men might gamble? Yet, I say I am better than all of them."

All the horses crowded about Babe to hear him.

"Yes, I am greater than all of these. For fourteen years without a single break, I carried to people news from all corners of the earth. It was I and my kind, who brought the newspapers to the people of a great city. It was I and my kind who helped people to know the news from the four corners of the earth.

BABE GETS HIS REWARD

"The news of great wars. The stories of heroism. The births and deaths of dynasties and kings.

"I brought happiness to many. I brought good news to all people. I was a newspaper horse. Has any hero done more than that?"

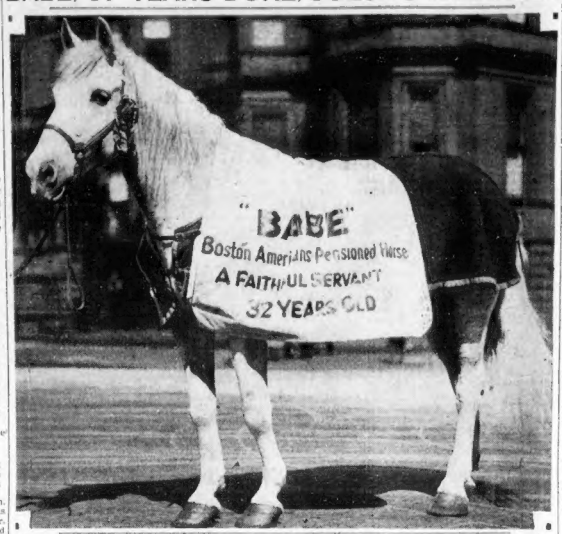

The keeper of the gate looked about him. The others moved away.

"A newspaper horse? Get in there, and go anywhere you please. I'm sorry I didn't recognize you."

Harry Cantor, a Boston American driver, heard the news of Babe's death today with genuine grief. For 14 years, neither had missed a day in their work of delivering the Boston American through the South End. Harry visited Babe every year since his retirement in 1918, and Babe always recognized him.

"Babe was a great horse," said Harry. "I'll sure miss him. That horse was just like a friend."

BABE, 37 YEARS DONE, GOES TO VALHALLA

Babe, who for 14 years drew one of the Boston Evening American delivery wagons, but who for the past 14 years spent a life of ease in retirement on Red Acre Farm, in Stow, today passed to the reward his 37 faithful years entitled him. Death came to the beautiful white horse, once well-known all over Greater Boston, and to Harry Cantor, his driver, with whom Babe never missed one day in the whole 14 years, came the real sorrow of a parting from a real, though equine, friend. The above photo of Babe was made five years ago when he emerged temporarily from retirement to take part in the last Work Horse Parade. (Staff photo.)

Rebellious Flea Fells Scientist, But He Carries on Typhus Test

Washington, Oct. 21 (AP)—A rebellious flea put Dr. R. E. Dyer in bed with typhus fever, but failed to stop his experiments for controlling the disease.

Haggard and weak, but convalescing, Dr. Dyer now gives instructions for continuing typhus tests to assistants, who come to his bedside in the Navy hospital from laboratories of the National Institute of Health next door.

That is where Dr. Dyer has been doing his typhus research for the Public Health Service, and where he contracted the disease while grinding infected fleas into serum.

He works also with rabbits, rats and guinea pigs, and his consultation is important since a single slip in the care of a flea colony on a rat has been known to destroy the results of a test months in the making, and then it has to be done all over again.

Often Dr. Dyer has stayed home from week-end trips in order personally to feed his fleas by a system he developed. Unable as yet to sit up, Dr. Dyer nevertheless is gaining strength.

"We've been calling the type of typhus we have in this country mild," he said today, a fellow public health physician, "Where do we get that word, 'mild?'"

His fellow doctors told him he had suffered an unusually virulent case. Which had considerably advanced science since Dr. Dyer had insisted on his "excellent rash" being photographed. His case also ran up a rather remarkable record in the standard typhus test, public health physicians said, "showing a positive reaction in a dilution of one to 70,000, where in the ordinary case the dilution for the positive test is only one to 5000."

Stock Exchange Seat Brings Mere $120,000

New York, Oct. 21 (AP)—A seat on the New York Stock Exchange was transferred today at $120,000, a decline of $55,000 from the previous sale which was recorded Sept. 21.

The high price at which a Stock Exchange membership has sold this year was $185,000 Aug. 20, when the late summer rally of stock prices was nearing its peak.

The low point was $68,000, registered May 31, or approximately when prices reached their lowest levels for the year to date.

TECH 'RIOTERS' UNPUNISHED

Technology, in an anatomical census today, discovered that freshmen and sophomores suffered few bruises and escaped pneumonia in last night's pranks between the two classes.

Two of the second year men had been close to the pneumonia threats, through the work of freshmen who deposited the pair, one in Central sq., and the other in Harvard sq., in lightweight scanties.

The "damage" wrought by overripe eggs, soft tomatoes and other missiles, melted under a few mops, as did the overflow from shower baths under which members of both classes were held captive.

Karl T. Compton, president, who was delivering a lecture when the "riot" broke out, was unruffled over the "pranks" of his charges today. With othes officials, he indicated that no severe action is planned.

TEST IS NEARLY FATAL

Police Warn Against Fake Ad Solicitors

Boston banks and business houses were warned today by Deputy Superintendent James McDevitt to be on the watch for fake advertising solicitors. Several firms have already been defrauded. The only description police have is of one man about 5 feet 8 and shabbily dressed. This man presents advertising contracts signed with forged signatures of heads of firms, to cashiers.

Wealthy Family to Support Foundling

Providence, R. I., Oct. 21 (AP)—If lack of money led parents of a two-year-old girl to abandon her, Sunday night, at the home of Royal Taft on Cushing st., they are requested to call at the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children's nursery and arrange to take her home. Members of a wealthy East Side family have volunteered to contribute funds for the child's support in her own home.

LEADERS FAIL TO MENTION MRS. THAYER

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Exclusive Republican society circles were agog today over the absence of Mrs. Nathaniel Revere Thayer, of Lancaster, from the testimonial dinner in the Hotel Statler to Mrs. Frank Roe Batchelder, of Worcester, new G. O. P. Massachusetts national committeewoman.

Mrs. Batchelder defeated Mrs. Thayer for re-election to that office by a vote of 20 to 13 when the Massachusetts delegates to the national convention met in Chicago a few months ago.

OLD WOUNDS REOPENED

While the scars of the bitter partisan contest that was waged at the time between these two prominent party workers was said to have healed, the absence of Mrs. Thayer served to recall the friction that was engendered at that time.

Mrs. Thayer's name was not mentioned once during the after dinner addresses and Chairman Amos L. Taylor of the state committee, Atty. Gen. Joseph E. Warner, the toastmaster, and others at the head table were plainly concerned when the ommission as well as the absence of Mrs. Thayer was brought to their attention for comment.

Chairman Taylor said that Mrs. Thayer had written a letter of regret to Mrs. Batchelder saying that a previous engagement in Rhode Island would prevent her from taking part in the festivities. He spoke about it to Atty. Gen. Warner but that official replied that he had not been made acquainted with the situation.

Former Governors Alvan T. Fuller and Frank G. Allen, listed as the headline speakers, failed to go on.

Mr. Fuller was prevented from attending owing to the illness of his mother, but Mrs. Fuller was present at the head table and received a flattering welcome from the gathering. Mr. Allen dropped in merely to pay his respects to Mrs. Bachelder and then hurried on to meet another engagement.

G. O. P. FRIGHTENED

That there is widespread uneasiness among the Republican rank contingent of the party in Massachusetts over the outcome of the national election was revealed by Mrs. Batchelder in her address to the assembled guests.

HOOVER FOR HENRY, BUT NOT FOR LIZZIES

Although Henry Ford recently urged his employes to vote for Hoover, he has no control over the political feeling of Ford owners as is shown by this windshield sticker which is being distributed among Ford owners in an effort to counteract the effect of Henry Ford's statement to his employes. Photo shows Miss Marianne Harrison, daughter of Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, displaying one of the stickers on the windshield of her car within the shadow of the Capitol dome in Washington. On the right is Jerome T. Harrison.

INSULL IDOL OF THOUSANDS IN EMPLOY

Samuel Insull, the man, was a paradox.

Arrogant, willful, short-tempered, selfish, vain, conceited, gruff and blustery, he had all of the mannerisms of the tyrant. At the same time he was big-hearted and helpful to his employes and friends. His regard for his son "Junior" was a form of worship. In turn, hundreds of his employes and followers had a feeling for him that was close to idolatry.

Edison was one of the few persons who had the temerity to call him "Sammy." To most every one else he was MISTER Insull, "the chief" or "S. I."

Liked "Yes Men"

Insull worked from 12 to 15 hours a day. Up at 5:30 or earlier, he was at his desk at 7:30 a. m. on the days when he was not out of the city. By 9 or 9:30 a. m. his mail was answered and he was ready for the endless series of meetings with his lieutenants for the rest of the day and sometimes into the night.

Except when he was out of town or abroad, he religiously attended the directors' meetings of the companies in which he was interested. His affairs were run on the tick. He was as punctual as time itself, and many an executive has felt the lash of his tongue for being a few moments late at an appointment. His mornings he spent at his office in the Edison building. In the afternoons he went to the gas company.

Insull was helpful to the young worker an considerate of the old. Many fawned upon him in the true YES man fashion and he liked it.

Not Hard Bargainer

In business deals Insull had the reputation of rarely driving a hard bargain. He was often twitted by other leaders for paying more than he might have if he had forced the issue.

The fortunes of many Chicagoans were increased by their associations with Insull in the days in which he was rising to fame.

Insull also gave his relatives opportunity in the utility field. It was his brother Martin's management of Middle West Utilities that caused much of the blame for the failure of that company to fall upon his shoulders. Another brother, Joseph, now retired, was aided by Samuel's influence in rising to success in the eastern utility field. Insull gave Joseph Insull's son, William, the start that helped him to become vice-president of the Michigan Electric Power Co. at Lansing, Mich. And Fred W. Insull, president of the Public Service Co. of Oklahoma, is indebted to his cousin, Samuel, for his early start in the utility business.

In business, Samuel Insull loved to crack the whip while others danced. At the same time he was advising his employes to take care of their health and offering other homely, helpful advice.

His Auto Armored

Courageous in his business dealings, Insull met the issues as they came. When gangsters in control of unions or otherwise sought to block his path, he met treated and settled with them himself. Although he never evidenced a fear of personal violence, Insull took few chances. The automobile in which he rode was a specially constructed armored car. It looked like an ordinary car, but Insull had it made bullet-proof.

One of Insull's idiosyncracies was that he hated to shake hands with people.

Newsmen could readily get into his office, where he greeted them courteously. But he was extremely cautious and sparing in his statements in these interviews. It was a side of his character readily understood in reviewing his downfall.

(The final installment in the life story of Samuel Insull will be published tomorrow.)

New York's Police Hunt Fiend Killer

New York, Oct. 21 (INS)—A killer whose victims were always old women whom he strangled or suffocated before he robbed them, was hunted today as the slayer of Mary Day, 70, wealthy recluse whose body was found in her West Side apartment yesterday. She was the fourth elderly woman to be found dead in a small area recently. Some mentally deranged person was considered the perpetrator of the slayings.

KIDNAP RAIDERS HUNT GUSTIN GANG GUNS

The South Boston home of Walter "Wally" Wallace, brother of the slain Gustin gang leader, was raided by detectives today in the first move of kidnap investigators to break up alleged gang hangouts.

The raiders, led by Sergt. William Crowley and including Detectives Conaty, Slack, Regan, Smith, DiNatale and Lafford, seized a quantity of alleged alcohol, dismantled a bar and took sundry articles.

According to Sergt. Crowley the raid was made on information that firearms were stored there.

The raid attracted hundred to Dorchester and Middle sts., near which the Wallace home is located.

Police, acting on a warrant, were forced to batter down two doors, one heavily barred.

The names of seven men and a 15-year-old boy, who were in the top floor flat with Wallace, were taken by police but no arrests were made. Police said the boy was a "lookout."

The raiders explained they must first have the seizure analyzed for alcoholic content before prosecution.

The tip on firearms proved to be false. No guns were found.

GIRL SEES DAD KILL MOTHER

Pottsville, Pa., Oct. 21 (AP)—Police said today that Tilden Wesner, 53, Palmyra carpenter, had confessed to slashing his wife's throat while his five-year-old daughter looked on.

Arrested as he slept in his car after driving aimlessly about in the vicinity where his wife's body was found, Wesner, police said, told how he killed his wife and then abandoned a suicide attempt in order to take his daughter home.

Betty, one of eight children, apparently never fully understood what had happened. She told police previously that "pop and mom" had left their car to go into the wood and that "pop" had returned alone.

Wesner, as quoted by state and county authorities, said he had followed his wife and child from the car and that, when another effort to have Mrs. Wesner return home failed, he had slashed her throat with a razor.

"Elect Hoover, Join Breadline," His Plea

$200,000 LEFT KIN, $200,000 TO CHARITY

Personal and charitable bequests of more than $400,000 were made in the will of Mildred Johnson of Dedham, which was filed today in Norfolk Probate Court.

Mattie Johnson, a sister, received the largest bequest, on eof $30,000, while Mrs. Madge Wilkes, another sister, was left $10,000. Bequests of $10,000 each were made to Frank H. Wilkes a brother-in-law, and to Ruth and Minerva Pelton of Brookline, neces..

Charitable institutions were left nearly $200,000. The following will receive $20,000 each: American Red Cross, Animal Rescue League, Massachusetts S. P. C. A. and Working Horse Relief Association.

The following institutions will receive $10,000 each: Robert Gould Shaw Home, Boston Seamen's Home, Florence Crittenden League, Children's Hospital, Morgan Memorial and the Audubon Society.

The American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals will receive $15,000.

The Salvation Army, Boston Home for Homeless Boys, Community Service of Boston and Community Service of Dedham will receive $5000 each.

Bequests of $5000 each were made to Nora Dyer, formerly of West Medford; Paul Gosta, gardner; Winnie MacDougal of Medford; Maud Damon, Ashley; Stella Jenesco, Dedham; Grace Dane of Boston and Pearl Munnn of California.

Other bequests included Mrs. M. Fickhart, Dedham, $3000; Marian Gow, Medford, $2000; Emma Cutler, Medford, $2000; Minnie Mattapall, $1000, and $500 each to Nellie and Bertha Lamb.

Motorist Is Freed on Manslaughter Count

TROOPS GUARD RIOT-TORN CANADIAN PENITENTIARY

era have wrecked their cells, but no one has gone in to see just what havoc has been wrought.

TROOPS GUARD BARRICADES

Everybody seems to be waiting for something, but whether they wait for further uproar and hullabaloo, for orders from Ottawa, or for the normal prison routine to be resumed, nobody seems to know.

More than 200 mutinous prisoners besieged in two corridors of the penitentiary, yelled curses at the guards, today as good conduct inmates were marched from cell tiers in the main building to the new women's penitentiary.

The mutineers threw the prison into turmoil last night when they broke from the dormitories and liberated other prisoners from two cell blocks. There was some shooting, but the men barricaded themselves in the corridors and the shooting stopped.

This afternoon the prison officials moved the good conduct men and prepared to round up the rioters and place them in cells.

It was understood that the officials blamed overcrowding for the trouble. The penitentiary has accommodations for only 750 men, but 906 prisoners are there.

This, in short, is the picture within the thick casing of steel and stone, which is Kingston penitentiary today, following the worst outbreak of mutiny within the prison.

Outside, flimsy barricades have been thrown up and are guarded by troops. They appear to be unarmed, but if you happen to examine their olive green trucks closely, you will see machine guns in there.

I stood at the outer barrier today and, like many others, was shooed away by an undersized soldier who silently munched a sandwich and waved his arms in the general direction of the St. Lawrence river, the soldier had been up all night in the rain, and had grown weary of telling people to move on.

All entrances, like the first, were guarded by flimsy blank barriers. The last barrier we located was simply two trucks loaded with potatoes, drawn across the road. I took a chance on crashing this one, sounded convincing and passed up a line of troops who were on sentry duty. It all looked very war-like. The troops wore steel helmets and sported shiny bayonets. Along the road were 11 trucks ready for war action.

HOWL TEARS AIR

As I reached the great main gate, three officers going off duty after a night of unrest, came out, eyed me suspiciously. From inside, one lone howl tore the air. It seemed to be the howl of a woman. I got a sentry to sound the alarm. The huge gate opened and I faced a double row of steel bars. Inside was a guard holding a key about the size of a Sicilian stiletto. Behind him were the troops. They carried rifles and some had pistols as well.

I explained I wanted to see General Ormond, the prison inspector. I sat and shivered because it was a raw morning, damp and windy. Soon the clanking gates opened again, and the word passed along, "All right, let him pass."

There was a machine gun on the inner roadway and men sitting around it. The damp floor was littered with papers from clips of rifle cartridges and the smell of disinfectant was pungent. Up on the walls, instead of the usual guards, were steel helmeted troops and scattered here and there were other machine guns. The troops had their helmets painted black. They all looked tired.

ROUTINES AT STANDSTILL.

I crossed the sunken roadway, where the Black Maria carries its load of caged men, and entered an office but with smoke. So far as this office was concerned, prison routine was at a standstill.

Desks were littered with papers, files, letters, pistols, cigarettes, flashlights, army coats, hats, gloves, even a few whips. Officers sat around on chairs and desks. The place looked as if all activity had ceased when hullabaloo broke loose. There were no clerks at work now.

"Well, about the food, did the men have dinner last night or have they had breakfast today?"

"No."

"And do you know what damage they have done their cells?"

"We have not investigated."

"Why haven't you? Is it because your men are afraid to go in?"

"I tell you, you must telephone Ottawa. I have instructions and those instructions are not to give out statements."

"And what have you told 'Ottawa?' "That the situation is unchanged."

SCREAMS OF WOMEN

"We have plans, but these are not being announced. There is one other false rumor I would like to allay; papers say the men howled and bayed in great fate. I tell you now that no male prisoner screamed in terror.

"Then it was the women prisoners?" "I cannot tell you."

"Well, since there were screams and these did not come from men, and since there are women in this prison, it seems rather obvious what you're trying to say general."

"I am only trying to obey my instructions."

I went out among the loitering troops again into the high smell of carbolic. They passed along the word "let him out" and Kingston penitentiary released one more man who was glad to get away.

Standard Oil Boosts Gasoline Price a Cent

New York, Oct. 21 (AP)—Standard Oil Company of New York today raised its gasoline price one cent a gallon throughout New York and New England. The new quotations, applying to all methods of delivery, followed similar advances by Sinclair Refining Co. and Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey.

All night
Dancing . . . Dining
Eating too much . . .

Yet . . . No Acid Headache
No Upset Stomach
this morning . . .

"Don't overindulge—don't eat too much, smoke too much, drink unwisely" is the Law of Good Health.

If you don't follow that law—Phillips' Milk of Magnesia; scientists say, is the QUICKEST, SIMPLEST AND EASIEST way to correct its effects. All you do is this:

"TAKE—2 tablespoons in a glass of water before bed."

"TAKE—2 tablespoons of water with the juice of a WHOLE ORANGE when you get up."

Or take six Phillips' Milk of Magnesia tablets the same way, which give an equivalent amount of Milk of Magnesia, for each Phillips' Milk of Magnesia tablet equals one teaspoonful of the liquid Milk of Magnesia.

What It Does

This small dosage of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia acts to alkalize the system. And an alkalized system is largely impervious to the bad after-effects of excessive smoking—excessive eating, drinking.

It sweetens and purifies your stomach. Banishes the acid headache, sour stomach, deadly depression that mark the price of immoderations.

Results are quick and almost invariable. Your head clears, your stomach settles—you feel like a new person.

Every person who smokes should know this. And take Phillips' Milk of Magnesia EVERY NIGHT before bed. Every person who overindulges in food or drink should know it. And keep a bottle of "Phillips" in his medicine chest.

Try it—just once. You will be amazed at what it does.

Be sure to get Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia when you buy. All "Milk of Magnesia" is not alike in effect, so look for the name Phillips—get the kind doctors endorse.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM:
Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets are now on sale at drug stores everywhere. Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

KNIFE HUNTED IN STABBING OF FILM GIRL

Hollywood, Oct. 21 (AP)—The ownership of one pocket knife and the whereabouts of another were sought today by police investigating the serious stabbing of 23-year-old Dona Rose Wheelock, film extra. Charles Morton, film actor, was held as a witness.

Miss Wheelock told authorities she stabbed her if yesterday in her apartment where Morton was visiting her. But detectives said the small pearl-handled knife found in the apartment could not have inflicted such serious wounds. They said Morton's pocket knife was missing.

The actor said he went into the kitchen to mix Miss Wheelock a drink and when he re-entered the living room he found her wounded.

A slight improvement in her condition was noted today by physicians, who performed a blood transfusion.

Morton recently was granted 30 days to pay alimony to Lya Lys, Russian screen dancer. His marriage to Lolita Mendrona, also a dancer, was annulled in 1929.

BANK REOPENED IN LAWRENCE

Lawrence, Oct. 21—The closed Arlington Trust Co. opened its doors at 9 o'clock this morning for business in newly remodeled quarters that had all the appearance of a hot-house from the abundance of floral offerings from practically every business house and professional man in the city.

Crowds stormed the bank at the opening hours—but not to make the heavy withdrawals as had been anticipated. Instead, for the most part, they merely inspected the new home, congratulated the new officers, or just transacted routine business as they did before the institution was closed by the bank commissioner many months ago.

Some withdrawals were made, but they were light, and considered for chiefly of funds turned over to those in desperate circumstances.

Hundreds of local residents visited the bank for two hours yesterday afternoon when the place was thrown open for public inspection.

Tame Mosquitoes Used in Malaria War

New York, Oct. 21 (AP)—The tame mosquito was announced today as the latest contribution of science to the fight upon malaria.

Mark F. Boyd of Tallahassee, Florida malaria expert, stated in Science, official publication of American research, that he has succeeded in devising an "insectary" in which malaria mosquitoes can be domesticated.

Heiress Weds

REV. DAVIDSON LOSES PULPIT

Norwich, England, Oct. 21 (AP)—Rev. H. F. Davidson, rector of Stiffkey, was declared today removed, debased and degraded from the offices of priest and deacon of the Church of England as a result of his conviction last July on charges of immoral conduct involving a number of young women.

The sentence was pronounced before the high altar by the Bishop of Norwich, who brought the charges against the rector. It followed a previous declaration by the bishop in court depriving the rector of all his ecclesiastical promotions in the diocese.

Before the first sentence in the case was pronounced, Rev. Davidson? in a long speech, declared his innocence "in the sight of God"

Have you tried it—
THE WONDERFUL NEW CHEESE TREAT FROM ACROSS THE BORDER?

HAVE you tasted Chateau? Try it—it's great! Chateau, you know, is the new cheese delicacy that once was served exclusively in the luxurious dining-room of a famous and ultra-expensive Canadian hotel.

But now Borden has brought Chateau across the border. Now you can get from your grocer the same cheese treat which once was served only to the guests of that hotel!

Get it. It comes in a convenient form that retains its creamy freshness and is easy to serve. And there are so many ways to enjoy its tangy, different flavor—on crackers (it spreads as nicely as butter)...in a green-and-gold salad...in slices, with pie or fruit...or lifting some familiar cheese recipe to unfamiliar heights of goodness. Order some now—serve it to the family at dinner time—and the fast-growing army of Chateau fans will gain new recruits tonight!

Chateau for the children? Certainly!

Yes, the children, too, can enjoy Chateau. It's good for them! It's easily digested. And it contains valuable milk minerals and body-building elements. The Borden Company, 99 Hudson Street, New York, N. Y.

Campaign Today Lacks Circus and Bread

By GILBERT SELDES

Campaigns are useful for a lot of things, among them being the election of a President. Some people think that they were invented to give the American people an equivalent of the Olympic Games or the Dionysian orgies of the Greeks, our quadrennial circus (without bread this year). To me they appear as the three months during which the American people recover their good spirits by listening to flattery; and what impresses me about this campaign is that the flattery is so subtle and hidden. Except for Mr. Upshaw, no candidate has pulled the vox humana stop, crying that the native intelligence of the American people will reassert itself and elect him and no other. The baby-kissing campaign may be carried on by Congressmen, a flag in one pocket, a cigar in the other. But for the most part the American people have been flattered because their candidates have given them hard crusts to chew; they have thrown economics into the air, for a political scramble, instead of penny candy.

Wet Issue Lost

Nine men out of ten imagined four months ago that the campaign would be fought over the Eighteenth Amendment; actually the whole question of prohibition has been thrown away. We have lost a lot of entertainment, because on that issue the Republican party would have had to do some plain and fancy straddling, not once but every day; the embarrassment of receiving support from the days while hedging for the votes of the wets would have been good comedy. Instead of that we have to think about the Reconstruction Finance Corporation which is not funny. I think we are entitled to be a little smug over our progress.

Gilbert Seldes

The newspapers carried, a few days ago the announcement of the death of Miss Fowler, once editor of the Journal of Phrenology: a brief note. Less than a century ago many people would have said that the death of a great phrenologist would be noted with more pomp and regret than the death of Charles Darwin; today phrenology is a faint memory, traces remaining wher people say they have "no bump of locality." In its time it seemed as good as psychoanalysis does to us. And was used in much the same way.

Looking through old Boston papers I found an advertisement:

An apprentice wanted—a stout boy not over 15 years of age, of German or Scotch parents to learn a good but difficult trade N.B.—It will be necessary to bring a recommendation as to his abilities from Messrs. Fowler & Wells Phrenologists. Nowadays we have experts who analyze us all and tell us what jobs we are fit for; all we lack are experts to find the jobs.

Not only the ignorant fell under the sway of phrenology; it was accepted, first by the civilized minority and then dreamed down to the masses. The sophisticates of the 1840's were the believers in bumps; not the bumps alone. Ralph Waldo Emerson spoke of Spurzheim, the founder of the "science," in the same breath with Locke and Lavoisier; Walt Whitman and Horace Greeley went to the same phrenological depot; and on the Boardwalk at Atlantic City you can still see Henry Ward Beecher's statement, "All my life I have been in the habit of using phrenology as that which solves the practical phenomena of life." And to the day of his death Alfred Russell Wallace, co-discoverer with Darwin of the theory of evolution, believed that phrenology was the master science of all sciences and that our century would be disgraced for neglecting it.

The Runaways

I was impressed, in reading the literature of this amazing fad, to find that people went to the phrenologist because they were dissatisfied with their work, or couldn't get along with their wives, or wanted to run away from home — in short, for the very reasons people travel to Vienna to waste the time of the great Dr Freud. For phrenology not only read the bumps on your head and told you what you were good for, but it told you how to develop the faculties you wanted, and in a sense, you could go home and raise a bump in the right place on the head of your husband, so that his philoprogenitivity or his amativeness, as they called such things, would become agreeable. It was better than breaking your own head against the stone wall of hard fact.

The great blessing of human beings is that every age invents its own ways of escaping from itself. The present, a most superior age, has invented at least three; Machinery, psychoanalysis and communism. Any time the three are combined we are in for a merry life.

ELY PLEASED AT REFERENCE BY ALLEN

Gov. Ely, at rallies in Haverhill and Newburyport, expressed his satisfaction with the characterization of Lieut.-Gov. William S. Youngman as "peculiar" by former Gov. Frank G. Allen at the Ford Hall rally held under the auspices of the Republican Club on Wednesday night.

Enthusiastic receptions were given the governor all along the line. In Haverhill 1500 crowded into City Hall to hear and applaud him and in Newport 800 turned out to hear him. At a third rally in Haverhill, of Italian-Americans there was another 800 present.

"I want this campaign to be decided on facts," the governor emphasized, "and not on the fancies of a 'peculiar' man."

The governor, in presenting his record in office, contended that his opponent, Youngman, was claiming that he, Ely, has increased the state debt by $13,000,000.

"He is $9,500,000 out of the way," the Governor said. "Just a slight inaccuracy. Just a trivial little mistake on his part. There is nothing the matter with the credit of the state. This talk of borrowing and impairing the credit of the commonwealth is a bit of political bunk."

Referring to the rally, in which Allen and former Gov. Channing Cox were the stellar attractions, the Governor allowed that the former had "not done such a bad job for the Democrats."

ROOSEVELT REVEALS HIS FARM AID PLAN

carefully read the bronze tablet on which is inscribed Lincoln's farewell address to the people of Sprinfield just before he departed for Washington in 1861 to assume the presidency.

Roosevelt was photographed standing in front of a bust of the immortal president at the entrance to the tomb. It was the Governor's first visit to the tomb.

From Lincoln's tomb the Governor went direct to the Arsenal, where he delivered his speech on the farm issue.

"FUNDAMENTAL CURES"

"I want to call to your attention one of the aspects of the great American agricultural problem," the candidate said. "More than a month ago at Topeka, Kansas, I set forth a comprehensive national program for agriculture.

"Today it is my purpose again to take up this subject and to enlarge upon it. This program is conceived to meet a condition which cannot longer be endured in a nation endowed with so much natural wealth. I indulge in no magic formula. I do not attempt the task of misleading you into hoping I have arrived at a single panacea for the manifold problems of agriculture.

THREE-POINT PROGRAM

"I propose, therefore, fundamental cures, and I do so in the spirit of honest frankness, with the belief that such a method is the sure way to win your co-operation in this great task that will face the new administration.

"May I also add that I would be the last person to claim sole credit for the program which I enunciated at Topeka or indeed for the enlargement of it which I propose to give you here today. It is a program worked out in co-operation with the wisest leaders of agriculture itself, and I pledge to you a continuance of that policy of co-operation in order that the program may be enacted into workable law, a law set into operation at the earliest possible moment.

"No attempt by the present administration to belittle this first, honest effort to meet the problem of the American farmer can hide the essential fact that my three-point program goes to the root of the problem.

FIRST U. S. DUTY

"The three great steps which we must take are:

"FIRST, the Federal Government owes it to agriculture to see that it gets a fair price for its products. That means that the price of farm products must be raised above the present ruinously low levels to which they have fallen.

"A properly adjusted tariff can do much in this direction, but the present tariff policies of the Republican administration have done precisely the opposite. Pending the relief that will be afforded by properly adjusted tariff policy, measures must be taken to give the farmer immediate tariff benefit. This means in substance a practicable plan agreed to by agricultural leaders which will provide for the farmer a higher return for certain of his crops.

"I set forth those principles which such a plan must embody, in my Topeka speech, and these principles have been widely accepted as a basic plan of action in formulating the necessary legislative relief.

TAXATION BURDEN

"SECOND, there must be lifted from the backs of every farmer the heavy load of taxation which today weighs upon him. This load is made up of three parts, the local, State and national units.

"At Pitsburgh I outlined the position of the Democratic party, and my position on the question of the honest balancing of the federal budget and the imperative need of immediate economy in national expenditures. I also reiterate now my promise to exert all available influence in the position as President of the United States toward the reduction of all state and local taxes.

"THIRD, we come to the vastly important principle concerning the burden which farm mortgages now bear on every agricultural community. I want to take this occasion at this time to amplify that part of my program. Let me first repeat what I said about farm mortgages at Topeka:

"It is my purpose when elected to direct all the energies of which I am capable to definite projects to relieve that distress, and specifically I am prepared to insist that federal credit be extended to banks, insurance companies, loan companies and the other companies or corporations that hold farm mortgages among their assets; but that these credits must be made on the condition that every reasonable assistance be given to the mortgagors where the loans are sound, for the purpose of preventing foreclosure and those conditions must be enforced."

LOWER INTEREST RATES

"I further said that 'lower interest rates and an extension of principal payments will save thousands of farms throughout this nation for their owners. And hand in hand with that, my friends, we must adopt the definite policy of giving those who have lost the title to their farms—titles now held by institutions seeking credit from government agencies—the preferred opportunity of getting their property back.'

"To that may I add that the government should make a definite condition when advancing federal credit that wherever possible interest rates must be lowered for renewed or extended mortgages.

LAND BANK OPERATION

Accusing the Hoover administration of being "derelict" in employing the $125,000,000 new capital of the Federal Land Banks to assist the struggling farmer debtor, Gov Roosevelt anounced.

"I shall recommend legislation to the Congress for the scaling down of amortization installments of Federal Land Bank borrowers when in the judgment of bank directors conditions justify such action, with provision for deferring such unpaid amounts to the end of such amortization periods.

"This partial and temporary extension will help the formers to save their farms until they can secure a better net income through the working out of the plans which I have discussed for the solution of the general farm program."

He charged that some of the joint stock land banks "have pursued a policy of destructive selfishness contrary to the spirit and purpose of the farm loan act."

Saying President Hoover in his Des Moines address "took occasion to disclaim responsibility for the policies of these joint stock land banks," he asserted that "for this failure to enforce the law, the President and his administration are to blame."

"I propose," Roosevelt said, "that these powers of the federal farm board (to exercise general supervisory authority over the federal land banks, national farm associations and joint stock land banks) shall be fully exercised to the end that this distressing situation shall be immediately remedied and to the end that the enlightened purposes of the Democratic created far mloan cat shall be fully carried out."

In a brief speech today from the rear platform of his private car at Mattoon, Ill., the governor said

HITS CAMPAIGN OF FEAR

He is equally confident that he has checked the "campaign of fear" which he has charged the Republicans with conducting in a desperate effort to keep President Hoover in the White House for four more years. In speeches in Pennsylvania West Virginia and Indiana the governor pounded home the declaration that instead of having anything to fear about a Democratic administration at Washington, the voters can count upon it to restore prosperity.

"It won't be just an ordinary landslide in November for the Democratic ticket," the Governor said. "It's going to be the only kind of a revolution that we Americans can talk about — a revolution at the ballot box."

He told a crowd which greeted him in Terre Haute last night that "Old fashioned common sense economics will make things better after March 4." Referring to the repeated appointment of commissions by the Republican administration at Washington, Roosevelt said

"I am not going to appoint commission after commission when I go to Washington. I am for action and not just talk."

More and more the Governor is stressing the need for the legalization of beer so that the federal budget can be balanced through a tax on beer. He expressed the hope that the Volstead law will modified "just as quickly as possible."

HEALTH PERIL IN ECONOMY

Economy should not be carried to a point where it interferes with the care of children, George A. Hastings, member of President Hoover's secretarial staff, and extension director of the White House Conference on Child Health, told 350 members of the Massachusetts State Nurses' Association at their convention in Hotel Statler today

"The money invested in health has kept its value in a world of falling prices," said Hastings. "We must economize, but we must economize wisely. One of the things NOT to economize on is the health of the future generations."

Officers of the Massachusetts Organization for Public Health Nursing elected today included Mrs. Harold A. Marvin, president; Mrs. Harold Plimpton, secretary, and Miss Marie M. Knowles, treasurer

CHECK SPOILS HIS ROMANCE

Romance came to them in the Public Gardens but it wound up dismally today in Newton court when James Williams, 39, of Dartmouth st. Somerville was sentenced to six months in the House of Correction for larceny of money by a bad check

Miss Elizabeth Wardell, of Cumberland ave., Portland, Me., former domestic in the home of Almarin A. Trowbridge, Boston investment broker at 734 Center st., Newton, was placed on probation on the same charge

It was testified that Williams and the woman became acquainted in the Public Garden and that subsequently he borrowed money from her frequently. On Oct 3 he mailed her a check which he asked her to cash somewhere, and she succeeded in having her employer cash it, believing it was good.

Imported Steel Cost U. S. Workers' Wages

Pittsburgh, Oct. 21 (AP)—J. W. Thomsen told the tenth annual convention of the American Institute of Steel Construction today that 240,000 American workmen were deprived of a week's work last year by importation of foreign steel Thomsen, vice-president of the Stupp Brothers Bridge & Iron Company of St. Louis, addressed more than 100 representatives of the steel fabricating industry from all parts of the country.

3 HOLLYWOOD STARS ROBBED OF $52,300

Los Angeles, Oct. 21 (AP)—Police were confronted today with the task of solving three robberies in which two motion picture players and a stage comedian lost clothing and jewelry valued at $52,300.

Helene Costello

Robbers invaded the home of Helene Costello, actress, overpowered a servant and escaped with personal possessions, mostly jewelry, valued at $50,000.

The shop of Carey Grant, film actor, was entered and looted of clothing valued at $2000. The home of Charles Mack, one of the "Two Black Crows," was robbed of clothing worth $300.

Miss Costello said the jewelry was insured for $50,000.

By LINCOLN KIRSTEIN

End of World About Due Again

Not so very long ago some earnest churchmen in Kansas sold all their worldly goods, wrote letters of farewell to their distant friends and relations, embraced those close at hand, habited themselves in white nightgowns and patiently awaited the end. The end of what? The end of the world. The world was to end on a certain night. Gabriel would blow his trumpet, doom would crack, and out of the million forgotten graves the shrouds would aspire to the sun. A grandstand even was erected and seats were sold, preferred positions to watch the greatest spectacle of all times, the farewell appearance of the planet earth.

Nor was this, as with other performers, its first and only farewell appearance. In 1931 the Prophetical Society of Dallas, Texas, announced that the end would be upon not us, but on our children, in the year 1998, or if not then, surely at the century's turn, two years later. These dreadful promises resulted from previous failures to keep other such prophecies in 1921 (April), 1924 and 1928.

Lincoln Kirstein

In 1917 various industrious searchers in the book of Revelation discovered that the number of the Beast who would herald the apocalypse being 666 that the name of Wilhelm Hohenzollern if certain letters were omitted, repeated and translated into numerical terms was 666, and then what?

Gabriel's Toot

In 1843, after several failures to finish us off, a great movement was founded which swept the state of Massachusetts under the fiery threats of William Miller. A comet coincided with its proof of doom, and at Westford the town drunk blew on a hideous toy horn a great blast. Glory Hallelujah! The good folk rushed from their houses. A man fitted with turkey wings to facilitate his flight to paradise leapt towards Heaven and broke an arm.

Mother Shipton, the Witch of England, promised 1881 as the last date in any calendar. But perhaps the most universal fear that ever united a darkened continent within recorded time was in 999 when the year 1000 loomed up like a hideous or a glorious inevitability and heaven and hell, the harps and the flames, were closer than next summer's vacation. But again the prophecy erred, and as always, undeterred, added 33 to the 1000, for Christ was 33 years old when He was crucified, and still the end came not.

Now it is nearly 1933. The threat and presence of wars are around us. World wide moral and economic collapse is promised, and soon the cabalists and wise men will again add up all the verses in the Book of Psalms, subtract the years of the existence of this nation, arrive at the date 1938, which is also the three hundredth anniversary of the foundation of Harvard College, and then in spite of Lux et Veritas, light and the truth, in spite of Christo et Ecclesiae, Christ and the church, which have ringed Harvard's emblem for the magic number of three hundred years—what then?

Logical Ending

In a book called "THE END OF THE WORLD," published by Simon and Schuster, and written by Geoffrey Dennis, we find all of the information and a great deal more. Geoffrey Dennis is an Englishman who, after a childhood of great poverty, was aided through Oxford, where he studied poetry, history and international politics. He served in the Great War both in the French and British armies and rose to the rank of captain. At present he is the head of the Interpreters' and Translators' Bureau of the League of Nations at Geneva. He has written two novels of remarkable power, MARY '32 and HARVEST IN POLAND. He is by no means as well known in this country as he should be. For "THE END OF THE WORLD" is a most extraordinary book full of curious implications, as frightening as it is funny, and as surprising as it is logical.

THE END OF THE WORLD is a book about exactly how and when the world we inhabit will end. It describes first the origin of the world and its seven explanatory theories or guesses: 1. The Nebular. A fluid cloud of fire after eons of condensing shrank to our globe. 2. The attractional. This cloud did not throw matter off, but attracted new matter from the outside. 3. The meteoric. Millions of meteors swarmed together and by progressive agglomeration solidified. 4. The tidal. A great star, far greater than our sun, was passed by a larger star and tore out matter which formed our earth. 5. The collisional. The parent star crashed into another, flamed and the fragments became other smaller worlds. 6. The planetesimal. The parent star, for one reason or another, cracked its sun shell and gave birth to new gases and matter which resulted in our earth. 7. The magical. IN THE BEGINNING GOD CREATED HEAVEN AND THE EARTH.

Each guess is as good as the next, for all purposes of absolutely unprovable fact. Combine these seven guesses and one has indefinite food for speculation. Mr. Dennis, with a steady, unwavering investigation marches through all the diverse possibilities of nature and one by one gives the seven chances by which the world may come to an end to balance the seven ideas of its birth.

HOW WE MIGHT END

1 The comet. If a comet approached us within hailing distance as has throughout time's history been feared, it might absorb the oxygen of our atmosphere and we would be asphyxiated. 2. Fire. The sun might grow bigger, as many stars do, and crisp us to a wandering cinder. Or we are still a "gaseous globe, with a solid crust much thinner in proportion than eggshell to egg." Our interior heat might burst out and consume the surface with liquid flames. 3 Water. The flood is a legendary threat of almost all known civilizations. A flood might rise, cover the face of the earth and drown us all. "Under the cyclic theory of ever-repeated destruction ever recurring re-birth and re-death of the world water and fire alternate, and conflagration breaks out in the great summer of the Magnus Annus of disaster, the diluvium mounts in the great winter. 4 Drought. The water might recede, be sucked away, or the fresh water become saline and drive the world mad with thirst & Cold. The ice caps might creep down on us from the poles as they have before and the Gulf Stream would freeze around us. 5. A crash. A wandering comet might bump into us on our route through the universe, or we might be thrown off our course by the lessening of the attraction of our sun or moon and crash into any number of celestial bodies. 7. God. Will He have mercy? Will He continue to forgive us for our unbelief and will He continue the time in which we pass through space?

* * *

Mr. Dennis in the second part of his book discusses the possibility of when—this year, next year, some time, or never. He allots in each of the ways a percentage of likelihood.

Comet	1
Fire	2
Water	1
Drought	15

Take it or leave it. The notions which this book evokes are enough to keep one from brooding over the simpler difficulties of one's everyday existence. Consider not only the crash of Wall Street, but the impending crash in the Street of Stars.

Junior League Winds Up 5-Day Meetings

The welfare conference of the Association of Junior Leaguers of America wound up its five-day convention today with Boston Junior League clubrooms. Three points of importance came out of the week of discussion. One was the danger of setting up independent relief projects and the need of co-operating with the existing relief agencies.

Another sounded the need of trained personnel for administration of relief funds and the third was the great demand for volunteer service and the importance of preliminary training to volunteers and emergency workers.

VOICE OF BROADWAY

By LOUIS SOBOL

Out of the Envelopes!

"Undoubtedly you have had numerous letters to the boy who through your column asked only for the affection of a real father and mother," writes Mrs. Arnold Stein. "We have six happy, growing boys of our own. Our home is small, but that lad will be welcome whenever he wants to come. We can find room for him should he so wish." ... (Aside to "Donald," the boy referred to—I have several other offers for you. Please communicate with me.) ... "We look for something new from a bright New York newspaperman like yourself," protests Boston Bob, "but your Pennsylvania Dutch joke is all wet. Scranton is 75 miles from the Dutch center, and the joke is originally accredited to Allentown and is 35 years old. Now if you want a really recent Pennsylvania Dutch joke, here is one only 27 years old—about the little girl calling her brother for supper. 'Johnny,' she shrieked, 'come by the house once, Mom's on the table and Pop's half ett.'" ... "Something about those sweepstakes ought to interest your Broadway," volunteers Gene Richards. "In the past three years more than $100,000,000 has been subscribed to the Irish hospitals and the Canadian Army and Navy Veterans' sweepstakes. Each of the charity organizations conduct three sweeps a year—the Irish and Canadian Army and Navy organizations operating on the Grand National in March and the English Derby in June. In the autumn draws, however, the Irish draw on the outcome of the Czarewitch, run early in October, and the Canadians on the Cambridgeshire, to be run off Oct. 26 at Newmarket in England.

"This year more than $50,000,000 was subscribed to these two charity sweeps. Of this ... 65 per cent goes to the winning ... and the remainder to charity and for ... purposes. Of all this only 9 per cent comes from America ... England, which forbids lotteries, but allows them in Ireland and other countries ... more than 50 per cent of the ... from ... subjects."

"I am writing to you in the hope that through your column you may help us do something about continuing the Central Commercial Continuation School," implores a group of students. Here's a school helping lots of people unemployed to better themselves in the business world so that when times are better they'll have more of a chance to get a job. The school was closed by the city to help cut the budget, but we are told that it costs the city scarcely nothing to run the school as the machines and the teachers are there anyway. The machines are going to waste as no one uses them and we could be using them to advantage. We did all we possibly could to get to see the mayor and the superintendent of schools, but it did not seem to do any good. So I thought if you wrote something in your column it may reach them that way and they might give us back the Continuation School." ... A copy of the American Spectator, weekly newspaper —the maiden issue—reveals an all-star by-line cast, including Havelock Ellis, Frank Swinnerton, Ernest Boyd, Louis Untermeyer, George Jean Nathan, Theodore Dreiser, Lincoln Steffens, Eugene O'Neill, Clarence Darrow, Branch Cabell and others. An unusual sheet, but there isn't a newspaper in the world that would have dared to print that piece by Cabell. Phewie!

There's a new checker game on the market. Informs G. P. Butters, "which is fully equipped with numbers for the big wigs—the game presenting one of the snappiest gambling boards yet produced. It was invented by the head of one of the leading advertising agencies." ... From Claude Kendall, the publisher, a refreshing frank communication: "You will shortly receive an advance copy of 'Tangled Waves' by Peggy Shane. Let there be no confusion—this is not the great American novel." ... "I am a graduate of Peekskill Military Academy, 6 feet tall, weigh 185 pounds and of good appearance," writes J. M. "It is imperative that I raise $750 in cash right away to prevent my mother, father and myself from losing our home and possessions. In return I will work the sum out for one full year regardless of what the nature of the job is that the agreement should call for." ...

This isn't a request for help ... just that so much of your shoulder space has been claimed for weeping purposes by Broadway's Own that I wonder if a small dry spot could be found by one whose connection with the Stem has been in an entirely non-professional capacity," writes a lad who signs himself simply S. D. "The situation is this: here I am at 33 attempting to compete with highly specialized persons offering their services while I, in all honesty, must admit I have never held a position of any type whatever. I wasn't born to the purple, but a queer twist of fate put a decade of indolence and affluence within my grasp and I had neither the strength nor the desire to withstand the temptation. I received my A. B. degree in 1922 and with the intention of entering a medical school moved to New York. I had about $2000 and having taken a two-year course in Economics I felt far too canny to entrust my money to a Savings Bank so, anticipating the mode by at least four years, I loaded up with common stocks with the result that I never returned to school nor until two years ago had I any idea I would have to go out looking for employment. My original $2000 catapulted into a fortune — well, at least, into enough to provide me a living grand enough for any idiot. When the inevitable end came I was far worse off than any speculator of the lot. Mr. A. could return to his law practice, Mr. B. to his cloaks and suits and Mr. C., in his desperation, could jump off a roof. My college career had not given me the practical background of Messrs. A. or B., nor the courage of Mr. C. I have never done a hard day's work in my life and despite my lying protestations to the contrary, in two years I haven't succeeded in convincing any prospective employer that I can. Now there's a situation for you—and you needn't try to help. You can't."

"Most fellows fight shy of girls who wear glasses," pouts Lou Ashendorf, "but as for me, I shun the girls who throw them." ... "A piece of information for you," offers Leo Lubin. "The girl on the cover of the coming issue of Country Home, the December 10th Liberty, the January Physical Culture, the December and February American Magazine, and one of the March Collier's will be Judith Dolan, Walter Thornton's model, and the artist will be John Newton Howard." ... "I can go back the pages of my memory," writes H. C. Cunningham, known to racing fans as the Paddock Kid, "to the time I was introduced to Lew Dockstader and one of his end men—a fellow named Al Jolson who was making a hit as a whistler. Nobody thought much of his singing then. My father, an old friend of Theodore Roosevelt, brought me down to the 14th Regiment Armory in Brooklyn where Teddy's regiment, back from the Philippines, was being mustered out, and in his generous blustery way, he gave me as keepsake the foot of a rabbit which had been shot by one of his Negro soldiers on the way to San Juan Hill. Back in the early 1900s, my idol was George Odom, now a trainer, but in those days one sweet rider. Some of the big events I saw him win were the Champion Stakes and the Lawrence Realization at Sheepshead Bay, the Dwyer Stakes at Aqueduct, all with one horse, Major Daingerfield; the Brighton Cup, the Brighton Derby and the Brighton Handicap, with another horse, Gold Heels. Real horses running in those days were Commando, Africander, The Parader, Hermis, Delhi, Irish Lad, Yankee and The Picket."

Donahue Estate Cut to $1,784,497 by Debt

New York, Oct. 21 (AP)—James Paul Donahue, son-in-law of F. W. Woolworth, chain store magnate, left a gross estate of $3,708,785, which was reduced, largely by debts, to a net of $1,784,497.

Donahue died after taking poison April 23, 1931, two days after making a will, in which he named his wife, Jessie Woolworth Donahue, and their two sons as sole beneficiaries.

150 Flee Celluloid Fire in Leominster

Leominster, Oct. 21 (AP)—Fire today caused damage of $20,000 in one of the mill buildings of the Doyle Works here. It was believed to have been caused by an overheated stock of celluloid.

Approximately 150 employes fled the building through emergency exits. Several were overcome by smoke. A general alarm was sounded.

It's You . . against Every Woman in the Whole Wide World

ALL women are competitors —one against the other —in the game of life and love. Gay and glad is she who wins. Sad and drab is she who loses —drab, as we suspect her skin is.

You may not have the eyes of Mona Lisa nor the chin of a movie star. But if you have a dull, drab skin, it's your fault, or the fault of the soap you use.

Camay, the Soap of Beautiful Women, is the soap for you! Gentle, pure, luxuriant in lather —soft to the feminine skin. Try it by all means. Boldly change to Camay, and see what the charming effect can be! Camay costs you less and serves you better!

NEVER SUCH VALUES IN SOAP

Camay's new price . . . and Camay's new package are the sensation of the beauty soap world! Women are flocking to buy! New thousands every day! Women keen for value, keen for beauty, in themselves and in their soap.

Never has a soap so fine sold at a price so low! Camay gives a more profuse lather, and comes in a gay new dress, in Cellophane. The price is so low, you can afford a dozen cakes!

POLL FIGHT FOR CORN BELT TIGHTENS

COLE E. MORGAN
Universal Service Correspondent

Washington, Oct. 21—It's a battle in the cornbelt. President Hoover apparently has Gov. Roosevelt stopped from further gains of consequence in Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Minnesota and the Dakotas. Roosevelt appears to have Hoover effectively blocked in Wisconsin and Missouri.

MISSOURI IN LINE

The Democratic candidate has the advantage of substantial early leads in all these states except Kansas, which has given the Republican ticket a consistent advantage from the outset of the campaign. Roosevelt's task is to hold his early advantage in this area.

The outcome in Missouri is not open to question. That state belongs to Roosevelt lock, stock and barrel.

Wisconsin appears almost as certain to be counted in the Democratic column, particularly by the La Follette Progressive Republican faction.

In Kansas the odds are in favor of the Hoover-Curtis ticket. The Dakotas are splitting pretty nearly even at this stage, but Roosevelt has the advantage of an earlier swing in his direction that will give him these states if he can hold on to it.

Nebraska is in about the same situation, but not quite as dangerous ground, because of the open and active support of Senator Norris.

IOWA BATTLE TENSE

As much might be said of Minnesota, where for a fortnight it has been almost a neck and neck race but with an early advantage piled up for Roosevelt.

Iowa is where the battle is really tense. It has been that way for a solid month and apparently is getting more so each day.

This survey of the corn belt is based on a critical study of returns in the nationwide postcard presidential poll of the Boston Evening American in co-operation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States.

On this week's returns Hoover obtained [illegible] varying from 18 to 70 in Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota and South Dakota, while Roosevelt obtained [illegible] in Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota and Wisconsin.

Roosevelt to See G.O.P. Witches Hang

On historic Gallows Hill in Salem where 19 witches were hanged in 1692, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic nominee for president, will witness the hanging of three modern Republican witches, "Depression," "[illegible]" and "Bunk."

The Essex County Democratic Club announced today that Roosevelt will visit Salem on Oct. 31, before he [illegible] Boston for his speech [illegible]. He has promised the club that he will attend the hanging.

Moro Chiefs Wounded

Manila, P. I., Oct. 21 (INS)—Three Moro outlaw leaders, Mohamed, Ismaludin and Imula, were wounded as 50 Philippine constabularymen re-attacked scores of the savage outlaws on the island of Jolo today.

How Nominees Stand In Nation-Wide Poll

Washington, Oct. 21—The tabulation that follows shows the total vote thus far recorded for President Hoover and Gov. Roosevelt in the nationwide Presidential poll of the Boston Evening American in co-operation with all other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States.

It also shows the majority each candidate has in each State in which he is leading.

In addition, it gives the gain of each candidate on the latest returns received from each State, as compared with the last preceding report from the State. These State reports are usually a week apart.

The final feature of this table shows the net gain of each candidate in each State where he has improved his position, as compared with the last preceding report from that State.

Dallas Has Big Crop of Spuds for Hungry

Dallas, Tex., Oct. 21 (AP)—This city is well fortified for the winter battle against hunger. It has some 100 tons of sweet potatoes, from the municipal gardens, cultivated by unemployed to provide food for the destitute. And all the crop is not yet harvested.

Steeple Yawns for Big Bell Thieves Took

Chicago, Oct. 21 (AP)—It was a mean thing to do, but someone stole the brand new bell, valued at $900, which the Bethany Evangelical Church in Suburban Highland Park was getting ready to put in the belfry.

ROOSEVELT HAS 3 TO 2 LEAD IN DIGEST POLL

In the fifth week's tabulation of The Literary Digest's nation-wide presidential poll, for which returns from all 48 states are reported in tomorrow's issue of the magazine, Franklin D. Roosevelt is leading Herbert Hoover three to two.

A total of 2,617,185 ballots are tallied in the current returns. Gov. Roosevelt receives 1,473,446 of these, or 56.30 per cent, and President Hoover gets 973,367, or 37.19 per cent. The balance is divided among the five minor candidates, with Norman Thomas receiving 4.84 per cent of the total vote cast.

The ten states reported in this week's compilation include Florida, Maryland, Minnesota, Missouri, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Texas, Virginia, Washington and Wyoming. All are voting for Roosevelt.

Hoover is carrying the seven states of Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut and New Jersey. Roosevelt is ahead in all of the 41 other states.

On the basis of an electoral college vote a division of the current balloting would give Roosevelt 474 electoral votes to Hoover's 57.

New York's returns are closer than in any other state, making the outcome here doubtful at this time. Roosevelt is polling 159,428 votes to Hoover's 148,796.

In an analysis of "how the same voters voted in 1928" it is indicated that Roosevelt is receiving 37.05 per cent of his strength from former Republicans, 47.98 per cent from Democrats and 14.81 per cent from those who did not vote four years ago.

The same analysis reveals that Hoover is obtaining 80.59 per cent of his votes from former Republican ranks, 6.11 per cent from the Democrats and 13.26 per cent from those who did not vote at the last quadrennial election.

Hoover rolls up his largest lead in Massachusetts, where he is ahead of his Democratic rival by a vote of 51,739 to 29,712.

The Socialist ratio in the poll has declined from 6.28 per cent in the first week's returns to 4.86 of the total of the current tabulation. All of the other minor candidates are polling less than 1 per cent each of the total vote.

Feel Your Headache Ease In Few Minutes!

Quick Dissolving Property of BAYER ASPIRIN Starts Relief 3 or 4 Minutes After Taking

Due to important, scientific developments in the world-famous Bayer laboratories, almost INSTANT relief from headaches, neuralgia and rheumatic pains is being afforded millions.

Because of a unique process in making and tableting, Genuine Bayer Aspirin is made to dissolve almost INSTANTLY in the stomach. Hence it starts to work almost instantly. And thus "takes hold" of the average pain or headache in as little as three or four minutes after taking. The fastest, safe relief, it is said, ever known for pain.

Remember, it is Genuine Bayer Aspirin which provides this unique, quick-acting property. So be sure you get the Real Article—GENUINE BAYER Aspirin when you buy. Naturally you want the fastest, possible relief—and that's the way to get it.

To identify the genuine, see that any box or bottle of aspirin you buy is clearly marked "Genuine Bayer Aspirin." And that any tablet you take is stamped clearly with the name "Bayer" in the form of a cross. Remember—Genuine Bayer Aspirin cannot harm the heart.

POLICE LAUNCH DRIVE TO FOIL KIDNAP RING

vestigation will be inspected at headquarters.

Despite the ordered drive part of the underworld allied itself with the police department today to halt kidnapings in Boston—probably the first time in history that the underworld has agreed to such an alliance.

Convinced that neither body alone can halt the kidnapings which have taken heavy toll in cash from several treasuries in the half-world, a spokesman for the "business men" there agreed to co-operate with police.

The spokesman for those who frown on activities other than those of trade in certain liquors and a variety of forbidden commodities, including protection, did not go to police but were approached by the latter with the proposition.

PARLEY WITH VICTIMS

At first the spokesman demurred but when it was pointed out that such an alliance would be a good stroke of business he agreed to co-operate.

Under the plan proposed this man will confer with those who have been snatched in the past six months—and it is admitted that some kidnapings have not leaked out—and will persuade the victims to give police information about their captors.

The big obstacle to police investigation of kidnapings has been the refusal of victims to talk, principally because of fear of reprisals.

A theory of murder in the ranks of the Rutstein kidnapers was weighed in police circles today as a possible ruse to throw police off the trail of a wanted man.

The murder theory grew from the abandonment of a sedan upon the floor mats of which were stains resembling blood. The machine was registered at the address of Maurice Morey Cohen but in the name of a fictitious John McCarthy.

The stains gave rise to a belief that Cohen might have been slain to prevent police questioning him.

Other investigators, skeptical of the murder theory, gave opinions that the car was "planted" to make police searchers think Cohen had been slain and thrown into Neponset River.

The theories were two of many angles that confronted police and federal investigators today in the kidnaping of the Dorchester and South End business man who was rescued by police in a Hull cottage last Sunday.

Reports that Rudy Vallee, radio crooner and band leader, was kidnaped during his September stay in Boston were met with a wall of silence and denials that are typical of recent kidnapings.

RUDY GUARDED HERE

Lieut. Detective George A. Augusta said today that persistent rumors centered around the crooner as well as several other persons in Boston.

"If the victims won't come forward with details, all we can do is continue to listen to rumors. I did not deny that Vallee had been kidnapped, neither did I affirm it. There were reports that he had been held and that was what police had to work on."

Another police official who asked that his name be withheld recalled a sudden move Vallee made on one of his trips to Boston. The move was from a downtown hotel to one in Back Bay.

He also recalled that Vallee hired an officer to guard his dressing room during another stay here.

James F. Owney O'Neil, whose Charlestown drugstore caters extensively to navy yard trade, was equally reticent on reports that he was snatched from the street last Saturday.

WOMAN TO BE GRILLED

Another woman is yet to be questioned in the strange case, police said today. She will surrender by arrangement with one of the detectives working on the case, it was learned.

Mrs. Lilia Pales of Hull, formerly of Back Bay, was questioned and released yesterday after she told police that Cohen, her former sweetheart, was in Nantasket Sunday just before police rescued Rutstein and arrested three on charges of kidnaping.

The federal end of the case reached out to New York and other sections with orders for Department of Justice men to pick up any underworld talk on the Rutstein case.

U. S. PROBE PLANNED

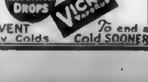

Postal inspectors are especially interested in whether the $50,000 ransom demands on Rutstein's family were made by mail.

If they were, the new law that grew from the Lindbergh baby case can be invoked and means heavy federal penalties.

Asst. U. S. Atty. Haven Parker said federal investigators are working in the investigation of the Rutstein case with a sharp lookout for clues that might aid the relentless investigation still under way on the Lindbergh kidnaping that ended in murder.

He is due to tell the special session of the Suffolk County grand jury on Monday the story of his kidnaping.

SPECIAL OCTOBER CLEARANCE TRADE-IN SALE on Firestone NON-SKID TIRES

FISCAL year closes October 31, and we are offering unusual bargains during the month of October.

October and November are the dangerous months of the year for driving. Trade in your thin, worn tires for Firestone non-skid tires, used by race drivers because they are the safest tires in the world.

Glen Schultz recently set a new world's record for the Pikes Peak climb, where hair-pin turns were made at high speeds and where a skid or tire failure meant death.

All world's records on road and track, for safety, speed, mileage and endurance are held by Firestone Gum-Dipped Non-Skid tires.

Come in today and exchange your smooth, thin, worn tires for the safest and best tires you can buy.

They cost you no more—besides, in this October Clearance Sale we will give you a liberal allowance on your old tires in exchange for these safe non-skid Firestone tires.

The Firestone tread is designed with angles and projections to give the maximum traction and non-skid. The brakes can stop the wheels, but the tires must stop the car.

Our Friendly Critic, Canon Dimnet, Gives Us Some Tart Advice

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

R. E. ROGERS

ONE OF THE MOST delightful and popular of our European friends is back in America again, Canon Ernest Dimnet of France, author of two delightful and sympathetic books "The Art of Thinking" and "What We Live By" (Simon & Shuster).

I say, "friend" advisedly. For the Abbe Dimnet—I cannot, somehow, seem to get used to his new title—is one of the few among our European visitors who does not harshly criticize us either on the ground or as soon as he gets back to pen and ink and a publisher. The record of visiting English lecturers has been especially notorious in this respect. Hardly one of the great ones, from Arnold Bennett to Gilbert Chesterton, but has written up his visit to us in the spirit of a highly civilized elder brother reproving and advising a barbarous small boy. It began, no doubt, with Harriet Martineau ad Charles Dickens. Matthew Arnold and Paul Bourget carried on the good work, to the great wrath of Mark Twain, who gave them as good as they got.

Some Critics Visit by Proxy

Ian Hay and Hugh Walpole have been friendly and understanding, but we must set off against that the spleeny outburst of J. B. Priestley a year ago—on the very day he landed in New York. And the younger English intellectuals, Aldous Huxley and others, have been pretty offensive. Which may be why the visiting English lecturer is a dying institution. Some of them, like the English author of "The Babbitt Warren," analyze us ex cathedra without ever visiting us at all.

The French, perhaps, understand us less than any European people. Occasionally a man like Andre Siegfried will publish a book like "America's Coming of Age," which our serious critics admit is just and impartial, although his cool logic and his use of facts we are not proud of is almost as irritating as abuse. But he wrote in the fine old tradition of De Tocqueville.

Canon Dimnet has been careful not to critize us—particularly in interviews, in which a man's ideas sometimes get a bit scrambled by the time they reach the public. In his books he makes certain mild criticisms of things he has seen among us, but nearly always with disarming humor and intellectual modesty. He will say in passing, for instance, that the American college man seems to be too highly developed from the neck down whereas the French boy is likely to be equally too highly developed from neck up. The idea is M. Dimnet's, but the phrasing is American and my own.

Last winter, when I had the honor of presiding at his Symphony Hall address, he implied gently in response to questions that America really was not very well informed in regard to European, particularly French, matters. His defence of France was traditional and authoritative, but his manner was urbane and disarming, without the contemptuous and self-righteous tone the Frenchman usually takes toward us.

Our Politics Mixes Him a Bit

His words to the reporters at the New York dock were interesting. He seemed a little out of touch with latest American developments, since he highly praised Jimmy Walker and suggested that he should be the ideal person to rally the wealth and sympathy of New York to the relief of the poor. It will probably be a shock to him to learn how thoroughly Jimmy has been deflated in his own city. But perhaps the good man can't be expected to understand all the ins and outs of the Tammany situation.

He remarked again that no nation could rise above the level of its lowest college and that if all our educational institutions could rise to the level of Harvard, all would be well. To ask more than that, he added with one eye on a Yale interviewer, would be impossible. But so long as our professors have to do too much work (hear! hear!) and our students not enough, he has his doubts about the value of our colleges.

Mostly he spoke of the need in America for new prophets. America, he seemed to think, is especially receptive to new prophets. Perhaps he was thinking of his countryman, Dr. Coue, a messiah for a day.

"I believe that if a great leader were to come to America, he would find a sincere following," he said, "for you need at this moment in your America the magnetic influence of a saint—some one like Gandhi. The situation you are having in America today is one that can only be met by such a great personality. It is no longer time for the politicians or the self-seeking, but for the leadership of such men as would have the affection and the loyalty of the people. That was the reason for the tremendous influence of such a man as St. Augustine. Were such a man to arise on the horizon, he would carry everything before him because of his humanitarianism. And were there a number of such men here this question of poverty of misery would be automatically wiped out."

It was at this point, apparently, that he mentioned Jimmy Walker—the St. Augustine of New York City.

What of Home-Grown Messiahs?

Passing over his implication that the Messiah must come to us from abroad, that we cannot be expected to grow our own, the deeper question arises: how would America of today receive even an authentic Messiah?

The national temper has changed greatly in less than a generation. A generation or more ago the leaders of ideal causes were received with frantic adoration on one side and with bitter, virulent, but sincere attack on the other. Bryan, Altgeld, Debs, La Follette, Roosevelt and Wilson received the tribute of sincere support and equally sincere opposition.

Today the tendency is to force all unusual men, particularly when they are suspected of idealism, to run the gauntlet of the wise-cracking debunker. I am sorry to say that the newspapers have led the way in this attitude. The idealist is not fought bitterly as a sincere but mistaken person. He is dismissed as a charlatan or a publicity seeker—the lowest, cheapest retort that can be made to a man's ideas. The inevitable tendency of the hard-boiled newspaper man to suspect everybody's sincerity and singleness of purpose has permeated the American people.

Such tendency undoubtedly deflates many a moral racketeer and faker—except perhaps in the political field—but it has also served to make it very difficult for the voices of sincere minorities to make themselves heard. And yet, as M. Dimnet knows and as we all should know, the great changes in the past have been initiated by the cranks and fanatics, the idealists, whom men adored and fought against with equal fervor. Such a conflict produces results.

But no results, except stagnation and inertia, can come from reducing all ideals to a wise-crack and all idealists to the status of publicity hounds.

WILD CARGO

New Jungle Thriller by Author of 'Bring 'Em Back Alive'

By FRANK BUCK With EDWARD ANTHONY

Sweet Potatoes Lure 'Little Tough Guy' Into Corral

In this installment the author tells of the capture of an anoa—the smallest of bovines, and, for his size, the strongest.

The animal kingdom, like the world of humans, has its midgets—miniatures that frequently are more interesting than the larger species to which they are related.

In the many years I have devoted to collecting living creature of all kinds for the zoos circuses and pet shows I have encountered three animal midgets of outstanding interest. These are the anoa, or pygmy water buffalo; the chevrotain, or mouse deer, and the honey bear. Each a pocket edition of a larger species, they comprise a trio that has never ceased to fascinate me. As the honey bear plays the principal role in a later chapter, I shall confine myself in these paragraphs to the other two.

Perhaps the most arresting single fact concerning the anoa is that he is the strongest animal in the world for his size. The smallest of the bovines—a full grown male standing about three feet high and weighing not much over 200 pounds—this little known animal is capable of prodigious feats of strength.

To give you an idea of how much of a pygmy the anoa is, let me cite that it is not unusual for the Asiatic water buffalo, of which he is a pocket edition, to attain a weight of well over a ton.

This tiny member of the buffalo family is brownish black in color with a small white blaze on the throat. As the males grow older they get darker, eventually taking on a coal blackness. This does not apply to the females (who, by the way, rarely reach a height exceeding two and a half feet); these ladies retain their original color. The anoa's horns stand up straighter than those of the regular water buffalo, and though much smaller, they are nevertheless formidable weapons.

About ten years ago I found myself preparing to leave for the Island of Celebes, a Dutch possession located due east of Borneo. This was the only place in the world where the anoa is to be found. I had an order for a pair of these odd miniatures from Dr. William T. Hornaday, then Director of the New York Zoological Park. Dr Hornaday was ever on the lookout for the rare and unusual. A live anoa had never been seen in America and it was his ambition to add the first available specimen to the fine collection of bovines on exhibit in the famous zoo which he headed for so many years.

I accepted the order with misgivings. Whenever I am asked to bring to this country an animal that has never been seen on our shores my first reaction is "Thanks for the compliment." My second is one in which my pleasure over the faith displayed in my ability to deliver the goods is suddenly submerged in a sea of doubts.

It is not that I lack confidence but that I am keenly aware of the difficulties attendant upon securing and delivering—alive—a little known species.

Midgets Localized on Dutch Island

Before leaving Singapore, my Asiatic headquarters, for Celebes, I thought it wouldn't be a bad idea to determine just where on this big island (which is over 300 miles long and almost as wide at its widest point) the anoa made his home. Not until I started making my inquiries did I realize how little is known—even among the animal traders of Malaya—about these curious freaks.

The first three men I consulted—real experts who had dealt in animals all their lives—all agreed that the anoa was to be found only in Celebes but each named a different part of the island as the creature's grazing ground. The fourth, who it developed, knew nothing at all about the species, thought it best to give any old answer instead of

4 CONVICTED IN MOVING RACKET

Harold O. Davis of Pearl st., Cambridge, operator of the Davis van lines, and three of his employes were given jail sentences in Cambridge court today after they had admitted findings of guilty to charges of larceny and receiving stolen goods.

Davis was sentenced to a year in the House of Correction and appealed. He was charged with stealing furniture and money from Prof Harry H. Plaskett of Harvard College, Miss Edith Door of Belmont and Miss Edith J. Cummings of Cambridge.

William J Cummings of Blake st., Cambridge; James F. Legee of Pitman ct., Cambridge, and Anthony Fragoso of Bristol, R. I., were given sentences of three months for their part in the larcenies.

The four men, according to the police were originators of a furniture moving scheme whereby furniture to be shipped to distant points was placed in storehouses and then sold. All appealed and were bailed in $500.

RUDY 'PRAYER' JUST TOO MUCH

Soft lighst, a divan, a pretty wife and a youth named "Rudy."

With such a setting, William R Tuttle, Lynn and Boston broker testified in Salem divorce court today that he couldn't believe his wife and Rudy (not Vallee) were "praying for him."

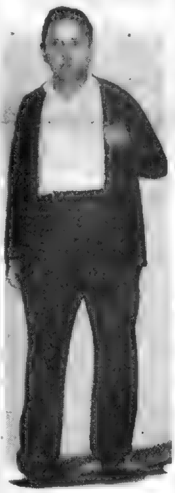

Such was the explanation, however, of Mrs. Helen Tuttle, the broker testified. He said he found the two together on many occasions in his home, King st., Lynn.

The Tuttles were married in 1917, but Rudy didn't appear on their marital horizon until last November, Tuttle added.

He said when he refused to believe his wife was "praying" she immediately told him she didn't love him any more.

BOSTON CLUES TRAP RING

Boston secret service clues led to seizure of a $2,000,000 counterfeit plant in New York's Chinatown and stopped the flow of spurious money into New England, it was learned toda[illegible].

Operatives here, who questioned Harry Pappas of Brooklyn before he was sentenced to two years at Atlanta, relayed information that led New York raiders to the plant. The building was raided yesterday and one man arrested. He gave the name of Harry Mills and said he was an engineer.

The source of the New England flood of $10 counterfeits was for weeks a problem to government men. Pappas was arrested several weeks ago when reports of the bills came from a dozen cities.

He was described by agents as New England contact man and was understood to have mentioned the names of several men for whom operatives are now searching.

Federal grand juries in Boston and New York are due to investigate the Boston [illegible] to convene Tuesday.

FINGER OFF A DAY OR RANSOM

Boston police inspectors today are investigating one of the strangest stories of fiendish revenge that has come to their attention in years.

According to a report received at headquarters, a big dice game was held up in Boston [illegible] week and $5800 taken from the players. The players recognized one member of the gang and the next day kidnaped him. They are reported to be holding him for return of the $5800. They have warned the hold-up men that they will cut off one finger a day from the kidnaped man until the money is returned. After 10 days they will start severing the victim's toes.

PAINTER SAYS HE DID NOT HUG WIDOW

She Feared to Go Home in the Dark, So He Let Her Stay All Night, He Testifies

Loud and vehement denial by the defendant of [illegible] allegations marked the resumption of the love drop balm suit in Suffolk superior court today.

Walter F. Corey, 51, Charlestown painter, who is being sued for $10,000 for breach of promise by Mrs. Augusta Jefts, 41, Charlestown widow, under questioning by his attorney, Joseph F. Denesi[illegible], denied he ever made love to her or asked her to marry him.

Q Did Mrs. Jefts ever give you presents of $5 shirts?

A—If she [illegible] them. I never owned a $5 shirt in my life.

Q [illegible]

SHE STAYED ALL NIGHT

Corey then told how Mrs. Jefts first came to [illegible] house in 19[illegible] looking for work as a housekeeper.

"I told her I did not want a housekeeper just then," he said. "Mrs. Jefts then asked me if she could stay at my home for the night as she was afraid to go home in the dark.

"I reluctantly consented and she slept in a kitchen chair. I sent her home next day.

"At various times after that, I employed her either by the day or week to do work for me. I never acted improperly toward her, or ever asked her to marry me."

Under cross examination by Paul Fosa, attorney for Mrs. Jefts, Corey again denied he ever made love to Mrs. Jefts or gave any indication that he cared for her.

Asked by Fosa if he didn't think Mrs. Jefts was pretty good looking, Corey [illegible]

"I wouldn't say that."

DIDN'T USE "DROPS"

Mrs. Jefts amended some of her testimony of yesterday when she declared that he had never heard of using love drops to gain Corey's affections.

She admitted today that Mrs. Anna Connody, whom Corey married in 1929 and who subsequently died, had showed her a clipping advertising love drops.

She denied she bought them and said she told Mrs. Connody that if Corey did not love her of his own accord she would [illegible] his affections by the use of love drops.

[illegible] testified that Mrs. Jefts had offered her $[illegible] about four months ago to testify in her favor. She said she refused.

Girl Auto Victim in Attachment Suit

An attachment of $15,000 to secure an impending suit for automobile injuries, was filed in Salem court today against Lawrence D. Pedrick, wealthy owner of [illegible] stores in Lynn, Salem and Beverly. It was filed for Miss Mary Downing, an employe of the exclusive Corinthian Yacht Club of Marblehead, one of two girls alleged to have been hit by Pedrick's car September 10. Pedrick faces charges tomorrow of driving while under the influence of liquor and of leaving the scene of an accident.

E. Boston Man Is Lost From Schooner

Shelburne, N. S., Oct. 21 (AP)—The Boston schooner Mary De Costa put into Shelburne to report the [illegible] of a man [illegible] yesterday's gale.

Michael [illegible], [illegible] of Newfoundland, living in East Boston, was swept overboard while the vessel was fishing on [illegible] Bank. [illegible]

101st Members Meet

The first meeting of the season of the members of old B Co., 101st Infantry Veterans Association, will be held at the YD Club on Huntington ave., this evening.

In Separation

Mrs. Florence Sartori Bradley, wife of Boston and North Shore multimillionaire, Robert Stow Bradley, who has filed suit for separation on charges of desertion and non-support. Terms of parting have been agreed upon and the suit will be uncontested, it is stated.

$300 TAX CUT FEE JAILS TWO

Joseph Maffeo, a Sutherland rd., Brighton, property owner, hesitated not a moment when two men came to him and suggested they could save him $300 on a tax bill.

Maffeo told Judge Devlin in municipal court today that shortly after he had received his tax bill Eli Peskin and Morris Wiseberg explained they could have the bill abated to read $361.50.

Maffeo said he gave the men the money and got a receipt. A few days later he received another bill showing he still owed $661.50 and he called upon the two men for an explanation.

"Just a slip. This is election time and everybody up at City Hall is pretty busy these days and it got by accidentally," was their explanation, he said.

Maffeo sought out Inspector William Connolly at the courthouse and told him the story.

Connolly arrested Peskin and Wiseberg. In court today Judge Devlin ordered both held for the grand jury on charges of conspiracy to steal and larceny.

PEDESTRIANS SCURRY FOR THEIR LIVES IN THUG CHASE

Girl About Town

—By ALYCE SIEMENS

Telling on Wini!

Three years ago this time, a slim broad-shouldered, raven-haired girl was one of Jonia's Hawaiians . . A vaudeville act . . . She was an interpretive dancer . . . One day she happened to be in a Manhattan music publishing office with Abner Silver, discoverer of voices . . . He asked her, "Come on, honey . . I know you can't sing but hum this tune over for me" . . . She hummed it—"Someday You'll Come Along The Man I Love" . . . Kind of weepy, plaintive hum it was, too' . . . Phil "Accordionman" Baker was in the next room . . . Rushed in to once-over the gal hummer . . And boy! . . . She WAS a hummer —in looks as well . . . The next night, the dancer, began to sing with Phail at his "Little Club" . She's never danced since . . . And sings songs nightly right now at Boston's smartest supper club, the Cocoanut Grove . . . With every gesture, accompanying her very different tunes, an artistic picture . . . She never studied voice . . Loves singing! . . . Has Earl Carrol, busy bidding for her services in his next show . . . But she wants to go to Europe . . . We advise it, too . . Before the Prince of Wales gets too old! . . . One earing of her song-singing would give him a new lease on life! . . . She loathes the cave-man type . . . But fancies, in a Big Way, the terrific attentions Montreal's Tony Bosdari is bestowing upon her right now . . . He trots to Boston every week-end . . . And it's the smooth, quiet, handsome Tony who is making the negotiations to put her over there in London . . . Yes, you guessed it . . . He'll follow along . . . Oh! my! . . We almost forgot to tell you the name of our heroine — who else could it be but glamorous Wini Shaw?

Friends to the End!

Sir Guy Standing and Philip Merivale, who opened Monday evening here in "Cynara" at the Plymouth, are both Englishmen who have been staunch friends for years . . . They have their little joke about their association! . . . During the war, Merivale was in the air service, while Sir Guy was in the navy . . . And yet they managed to meet on leave . . . Then they played in "Paolo and Francesca" and "Jealous Moon" together . . . Later, Sir Guy followed Merivale in the leading role of "Road to Rome" . . . And now, here they are together again in "Cynara" . . . Merivale says that if there should be another war and Sir Guy should be in the navy again, he supposes that when he lets down his parachute he would probably land in Sir Guy's cabin!

Brief Bits!

Song-writer Mrs. Eddie Rose of Commonwealth ave., is now turning manager of her own beautifying business in her own home . . . And Radio announcer John (WBZ) McNamara is about to ready the many plays he's authored for radio presentation in book form . . . While the winter home of Society's Mrs. E. N. Kimball on Arlington st., has its latch up for her friends since she's just returned from a New Hampshire summer . . . Providence's Charlie Malaney, assistant manager of the Biltmore there, is an eligible bachelor with a swell disposish and dimples! . . . Lil "Chalet Hostess" Sennett won't wear pearls because she thinks it'll bring her bad luck since she was born in February! . . . That brunette who plays for him on the wee piano as he sings from table to table at the Grove is Jack Lewis' frau . . . We think our society authority, Betty Alden, is most becomingly attired when in white . . . The Desmarais have opened up their new home on Arlington st . . . Sam (NBC Artists' Bureau) Ross has a "I'm-a-poor-dancer-complex" when he really isn't!

Whenever Ethel Barrymore knows where Eddie "Of-the-Grove" Chester is doing his comicals, she trots to his club spot and only asks to be put in a dark corner where she can be alone and chuckle over him! . . . Floyd Bell and his sweet wife, Grace, will celebrate their 15th wedding anniversary Saturday and Floyd admits he's still in love with his wife—ain't that sumpthin these days? . . . Albertha Tuttle is in New London helping teach dance steps to some of her cousin's students—while Albertha takes her vacation! . . . Next week Buddy Taylor, who gave those imitations recently with Sammy Liner at the "Met," will audition for Tommy "He-Manages-the-Mills-Brothers-and-the-Boswells" Rockwell in New York.

Ohh! That Kiss!

Wonder if Gloria Braggiotti ever remembers now away back before Rudy Vallee became famous, when she sampled the Vallee kisses at one of those Smith-hosted parties at Ogunquit? . . . Providence's John Novak, who broke Eleonora Sears' Boston-to-Providence walking record a few years ago, is now managing the Crown hotel there—and still a most eligible bachelor on the loose! . . . Who received that sparkly crystal necklace that Ben Wilson bought from that chap in the Bradford pharmacy Thursday night? . . . Lady Barrister Elizabeth McCarthy is codifying the law of libel for newspapers which is taking her a good three months to do, when she thought it'd be all over in as many weeks . . . We'll probably receive one of the first printed copies! . . . "You were the nuts" was the most popular compliment those three singing debs received from their debbie sisters, expressing their appreciation of their vocal talent at the Egyptian Room on Wednesday! . . . Emily "Girl In The Green Dress" Penny is a cuddly dancer! . . .

3 ARRESTED ON TRUCK THEFT CHARGE

Scores Imperilled in South Boston as Police Pursue Quarry Through Crowded Streets

Scores of pedestrians crossing Broadway, South Boston, were forced to run for their lives today during a police chase after three men who had stolen a bakery truck.

The chase began at Fifth st. and Broadway and ended at Dorchester st. and Broadway, where Sergt. Fred Bauer arrested the three youths.

The trio, booked on charges of larceny, were Michael Foley, 22, of Wendel pl; James Griffin, 21, of East Eighth st., and William O'Brien of East st., South Boston.

The chase was one of the most spectacular in South Boston in several months. It began at a time when Broadway was filled with children on their way to school and when scores of workers were en route to their places of employment.

In several instances older men carried children to the sidewalk as the truck and police car careened in and out of traffic, racing from one side of the street to the other.

Sergt. Bauer, his gun in hand but unable to use it because of the crowds on the street continually blew his whistle to draw the attention of other officers.

The chase ended, however, when the racing bakery truck was blocked by another machine.

Bank Management Conference Told by Ballentine That the Worst of Slump Is Over

Federal aid in supporting the country's credit has "cushioned the blows of depression, checked the rigors of liquidation, warded off disaster and has brought nearer the resumption of normal business and employment," it was asserted today by Under Secretary of the Treasury Arthur A. Ballentine at the Copley Plaza.

Speaking at the third New England Bank Management Conference, the under secretary declared establishment of the Reconstruction Finance Corp. was "a plan boldly conceived, which is being earnestly and carefully executed.

"If completed according to the vision under which it was undertaken," he said, "it will constitute the greatest assistance ever provided for our people in saving them from unnecessary losses and restoring to them the benefits of normal conditions."

Gilbert Balkam, manager of the department of analysis and new business at the Quincy Trust Co., Quincy, told the delegates the up-to-date bank today is alive with sales spirit, and every employe realizes he is a factor in creating an atmosphere which either assists or handicaps the teller as he contacts the bank's customers.

"This is bringing the bank down to the level of other business, where it belongs," Balkam said. "Too long has the bank been looked upon with awe as some distant, high and mighty power, superior to other business and supreme over all business."

Romance Is Routed at B. U. as Co-Eds Eat Their Onions

Between the odorous tang of onions on the girls' breaths and the reek of smoke-bronzed pipes and bologna-bologna cigars crusting the exhalations of the boys, Boston University was in a bit of a bad way today with almost a crying need of rapprochement.

The Boston University News started the battle of the odors by warning the girls of the College of Practical Arts and Letters that if they did not dispense with the odor of "some product of Bermuda" prevalent in the college corridors, the boys would look elsewhere for dates.

Today the girls came back in defense with the declaration: "If men can smoke those nasty-smelling cigars and pipes, I guess we can have a clear conscience even if we do eat onions.

"Men want thin, beautiful girls, with fine complexions, but when we try to become that way by eating onions they change their mind."

Is that so?

Wrightington Opens "Share Work" Drive

The nationwide "share the work" campaign was launched in Massachusetts today by Chairman E. N. Wrightington, who announced the names of a score of leading business and industrial men to direct it here.

Among these is Col. Benjamin A. Franklin, of Springfield, former president of the Associated Industries of Massachusetts.

TRAFFIC DETOUR AT KENMORE

All traffic will be barred in Commonwealth ave. from Kenmore station to St. Mary's st. from 8 p. m. Saturday and 8 a. m. Monday in preparation for the opening of the new Kenmore subway station.

Outbound traffic will be detoured along Deerfield st., Bay State rd. and Ashby st. to Commonwealth ave. Inbound traffic will turn right at St. Mary's st. and continue along Mountfort and Beacon sts. to Commonwealth ave.

Traffic Commissioner Conry asks that motorists remember the temporary rules in order to avoid confusion.

Mare Booked as Stubborn by Police

Following a two-mile chase through streets of Brighton early today a brown mare, owner unknown, was caught by Sergt. H. A. Ferrulla and Patrolman John Jennings in an alley off Everett st. in Brighton.

The policemen found the horse racing along Western ave. They gave chase and after a two-mile chase the horse was lassoed. In order to comply with the regular police regulations the horse was brought before the booking officer's desk and upon refusal to answer questions was booked as a "stubborn horse."

MAN BITTEN IN DOG-RAT FIGHT

For the first time in his life—and maybe his last—Stewart Baker, 25, of Water st., South Natick, today acted the much practiced role of peacemaker. As a result he is nursing two badly bitten hands.

He told police the glare of his headlights focused on a muskrat and a police dog engaged in a pitched battle as he was driving home early today along Washington st., Wellesley.

He stopped his car and went to the rescue of the dog, who, although the bigger of the two, was getting the worse of the battle, and bit both of his hands.

38 More Booked by "2-Gun," Face Court

Thirty-eight more speeders out of the 114 whose names Patrolman James H. "Two-Gun" Baker of Quincy turned in from his last days as motorcycle officer, were arraigned today in Quincy court.

Next Wednesday the last batch of speeders, 38 more, will be arraigned in Baker's last stand as a motorcycle officer. He is now on night duty in a police prowl car.

Tickets are good going on trains except extra fare trains, from noon today, and on trains Saturday not to reach New Haven later than 2 p. m. Tickets are also good returning on other trains, except extra fare trains, leaving New Haven until midnight Sunday.

Dorchester Couple 60 Years Married

Mr. and Mrs. Asa Low, of 27 Edson st., Dorchester, will celebrate their 60th wedding anniversary tonight with a reception and family reunion at the Dorchester Temple Baptist Church, Washington st.

They were married Oct. 21, 1872, in Springvale, Me. Three children and 11 grandchildren are expected to attend the reunion. Mr. Low is 82, and Mrs. Low, 81.

Autoist Fined $210 After Quincy Ride

Walter Fowler, 35, of Middle st., New Bedford, wanted to go for a ride Sunday—but he didn't think so much about that ride today. In Quincy court Fowler was fined $210 on charges of drunkenness, drunken driving, operating an uninsured car, operating an unregistered car and using plates assigned to another. He appealed.

Boston Man Gets 5 Years in Auto Theft

John Stone, 33, of Myrtle st., Boston, was sentenced to five to eight years in State prison, today, by Judge Thomas J. Hammond, in Middlesex Superior court for breaking and entering the showroom of the Marlboro Auto Co. and the larceny of a car.

Slugged, Robbed of $259 in Chelsea Speak

John Famolare, 35, of Bennington st., East Boston, reported to police today that he was slugged and robbed of $259 last night in a Chelsea speakeasy. Sergt. William O'Connor of Chelsea was assigned to the case. Famolare said the speakeasy was in Pearl st.

"OK" Says GOOD HOUSEKEEPING

Answering Your Questions About

BIRDSEYE FROSTED FOODS

Are They Different from Slow Frozen Foods? YES In ordinary frozen products the food cells are broken by large ice crystals. When the food is thawed, the flavor essences and juices leak out and evaporate. In Birdseye Frosted Foods the intense Arctic cold freezes their moisture in tiny frost particles too small to damage the cells.

Fresh-Flavored? . . YES They are "fresher than fresh". Quick-frozen at the peak of their freshness, Birdseye Foods retain all of their original qualities; and they are kept in their original fresh state by the protecting cold, right to your kitchen.

Wholesome? . . . . YES All Birdseye products are carefully selected from the choicest foods. All the healthful properties, all the nutritional values of fresh foods at their best are sealed in by quick-freezing.

Clean, Sanitary? . . YES They are triply protected, by cellophane, package, and an outer wrapping of wax paper. No hands can touch them from the time they are quick-frozen until you get them.

Standard Quality? . YES You know you're getting uniform quality just as with any other packaged food.

FROSTED FOODS SALES CORPORATION
3 Commercial St. (New England Division) Boston, Mass.

Convenient? . . . . YES They are doubly convenient: (1) They are purchased as easily as ordinary groceries; (2) in your home there is no preparation needed before cooking. Waste and inedible portions have been removed. Just take Birdseye Foods out of their packages and cook them, either frozen or defrosted.

HUNDREDS of packages of Birdseye Frosted Foods have been tested in the Good Housekeeping laboratory and prepared in their test kitchen. Hundreds of Birdseye Frosted Foods meals served to guests and employees. More than a year of continuous work by Good Housekeeping's staff is represented by this Official Seal of Approval—a sign of quality recognized everywhere.

"No Eatee; No Paradee." Eli Becomes Picayune.
Hurrah for the Kaydets. The Pocketless Pants.
The Good Old Army Way. Ever Live on "Chits"?

Why Harvard Will Make Whoopee on Nov. 5

WHILE WAITING until tomorrow to wah who wah for Dartmouth and raw, raw, raw for deah old Harvard, let's rise on our hind legs and give a yell for the Army. Ah, they are the b'ys for you! And did you see the Army's answer to Yale's picayune decision not to blow the Kaydets to the usual before game banquet tomorrow, but for "economy's sake"—and think of the dollars the Army is causing to pour into Yale coffers—simply to provide the West Pointers on one of their very, very few holidays and after the long trip from way up the Hudson with a box luncheon? "As Napoleon said," declared the Cadets, "an army marches upon its stomach. No eatee: no paradee." Spoken like He-Men, Cadets! What will the Army-Yale game be without the usual before game parade of the gray-coated phalanx from West Point? What would the Harvard-Army game be without it? College football to the spectator is as much of a spectacle as it is a sport. And if you can find any sports spectacle in this wide world more interesting, heart warming, thrilling, than the before game parade of those upstanding, gray-coated striplings from the Point, we'll walk up Washington st. in our pajamas for you, or do the dance of the seven veils on the Capitol dome!

AND OF ALL the visitors in this wide wide world for Yale to pu[illegible] that alleged "economy" stunt on! After the way the Army plays host to everyone who visits the Point! Boy, they make you feel right to home at the Point. The Army takes you in its arms and gives you everything it has. The Army gives until it hurts. Do you know that just to provide visiting teams, officials, scribes a good time at the Point, the officers, men, cadets there actually put themselves in hock for months? The federal government allows just so much, no more, for expenses. Officers and cadets at the Point often have had to beg, borrow and steal in order to treat the visitors in the good old Army way. They've gone in hock cheerfully for Eli Yale many times. And now in return Eli Yale, for "economy's sake," says all the Pointers will get, tomorrow, is a cold box luncheon! Who is drawing the crowd to the Bowl, tomorrow? Yale? Not by a jugful! It's the Army that will draw the first decent-sized crowd that has seen a Yale game this year. It is the Army who is sweetening Yale's kitty. If Yale wants to economize, why doesn't it start in by reducing the price of admissions to meet the diminished purse Depression has shrunk John Q. Public's pocketbook into? Hot? Yes, we'll admit Yale treatment of the Cadets has us a bit torrid under the collar. And we'll wager it has the majority of Yale men sore as a boil, too.

WE HAVE a hunch that Yale men will act before the Cadets arrive in New Haven for tomorrow's game, that the Army will get its usual "feed" and in return will give its usual parade. Whether Yale does or does not emerge from its niggardliness the Army is sure of a royal welcome and a regal spread when it visits Harvard in Cambridge a fortnight hence. John Harvard isn't forgetting a little incident that happened way back at the turn of this century when the old Puritan gent and his blunderbus payed his first, his very first visit to West Point. As the Harvard men were getting on the train for home after the game they were handed a bag of money, which the Army men told them was for expenses. Harvard accepted with thanks. They didn't open the money bags until they had returned to Cambridge. They found it contained a miscellaneous assortment of nickles, dimes, quarters and dollar bills.

WHERE DID THE money come from? John Harvard started to cogitate and ratiocinate. There had been no "gate." That first Harvard-Army game at the Point was witnessed by only a handful of spectators in addition to the Cadet corps. Ol' John Harvard thought and thought and thought. Gradually it dawned upon the old gent that those nickels, dimes, quarters and dollar bills had come from deep down in the none too full pants pocket of the officers at the Post. The Kadets, you must know, have no pockets in their uniforms, but more about that later. Back to those Harvard expenses. They had been paid by the shavetails, first lieutenants and captains at the Post, who ill could afford it. The hat had been passed and everyone at the Point had been "taxed" to entertain Harvard. Army had put itself in hock for many months just to give Harvard a good time. This saddened John Harvard. He wrote a nice letter to the Army asking him if he wouldn't take the money back. Proud Army declined. So Harvard kept the money and purchased a big silver loving cup to commemorate the Army's generous act and swore to be Army's loyal friend forever and a day. And that's one reason why Jawn Harvard will make real whoopee when the Kadets come to town a fortnight hence.

DID YOU KNOW that when the Cadets avisiting go, as they'll visit Eli Yale in New Haven, tomorrow, they have to depend solely on their hosts? Did you know that when on one of those rarest of occasions a Cadet gets a few hours leave of absence and takes a flapper to restaurant, theater or ball, that nine times out of ten the martial young god that sets all feminine hearts fluttering, hasn't a dollar in his jeans, and that the woman pays? S'truth! In the first place the Cadet has no pocket in his uniform.

AND IF YOUNG MISTER West Pointer did have pockets in his panties, it wouldn't do him any good. Uncle Sam is supposed to pay a Cadet $65 per month. But the budding young general sees less of that $65 than Pat does after the good woman grabs his weekly wage. First, every month $14 is taken out, so that the Cadet can pay for his uniform after he graduates. Of the remaining $51, a certain part must be set aside to pay for the six leaves of absence he is granted in his senior year. He must pay for essentials and "luxuries" at the Point in "chits." It is a queer Cadet that finds at settlement time his "chits" haven't eaten up all the remainder of his princely salary. No Cadet is allowed to receive money from home or any other quarter except the government. Not so long ago a young West Pointer was left $2,000,000. He wanted to throw a party on one of his leaves. The government, however, wouldn't let him receive a single, solitary penny of the $2,000,000.

STAR KICKER IS LOST TO DARTMOUTH

Hanover, N. H., Oct. 21.—Dartmouth's prospects for the annual gridiron battle with Harvard tomorrow were appreciably dimmed today when Bill Clark, of Amesbury, promising halfback, strained a tendon in his right leg in practice, making it impossible for him to run or punt for a week at least.

Clark, who captained last year's freshman team, was working out in a dummy scrimmage with the second string team when he suddenly pulled up lame. An examination revealed that the tendon had been rather severely strained.

Clark's injury, following the report that Al Baldwin, the veteran left tackle, will probably be lost to the team with a leg injury, came as a fatal stab to the faltering Indian hopes of a win over the Crimson with all her veterans in line.

MORTON TO KICK

With the loss of Clark, who had done the majority of Dartmouth punting and passing this season, Coach Jack Cannell is now faced with the task of re-assigning these important duties. In his starting backfield composed of Rolly Morton, Sammy Fishman, "Ike" Powers and Dave Hedges, the punting burden will fall upon Morton, who, although not equal to Clark as a booter, is showing steady improvement.

33 IN SQUAD

When Jack Hill of Nashua replaces Hedges at fullback he will take over the kicking duties.

With Baldwin on the sidelines, Donald Hagerman of Arlington, Mass., a sophomore, will make his debut in the starting lineup for the Indians.

Thursday's practice, staged on soggy Memorial Field, was devoted primarily to dummy scrimmage with the first and second-string elevens concentrating on shift and other new plays recently incorporated into the Indian attack.

Dismissing the squad, Coach Cannell announced that there would be no practice drill today. The squad, 33 men in all, will leave at noon on a special train with the 75-piece band and a large delegation of students and will arrive in Boston tonight.

ROSS IS CHOICE OVER BAT

Chicago, Oct. 21 (AP).—Barney Ross, young Chicago contender for the world lightweight championship, will have an opportunity tonight to demonstrate how well he is equipped with the qualifications in a ten-round bout with Bat Battalino, former featherweight champion, at the Chicago Stadium.

Although he has engaged in less than 40 professional fights, Ross has made important progress recently, a knockout over Frankie Petrolle, and a ten-round decision over the veteran Ray Miller being his most noteworthy achievements.

COAST GRIDMEN DEFENDED

San Francisco, Oct. 21 (INS).—Northern California's two big institutions of higher learning, Stanford and the University of California today evinced disdain for John T. McGovern, co-author of the celebrated Carnegie Foundation's Bulletin No. 23, and his latest criticism of Far Western football.

McGovern said, in New York, that pr[illegible] of athletes has almost ceased in the East, is ceasing in the Middle West, but is still going on in the South and the Far West.

"I have every reason to assert that in spirit and in determined purpose the institutions of the West are not behind those of the rest of the country in dealing with this question," was the answer of Robert E. Swain, acting president of Stanford.

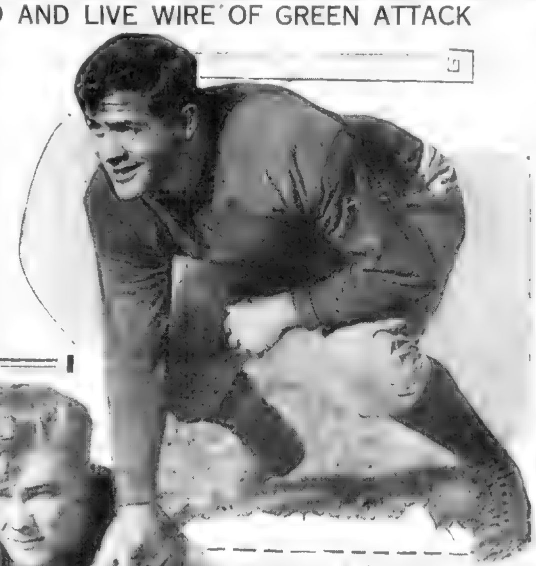

Dean T. M. Putnam, California's faculty athletic representative, said he didn't care what other universities are doing.

"I have nothing to add to what's been said before," he commented. "We are following the instructions of President Robert Gordon Sproul and have all we can do to mind our own business. Nothing has been changed at California."

DYNAMO AND LIVE WIRE OF GREEN ATTACK

Sammy Fishman, right, Malden boy and Dartmouth's finest running back, will be the live wire of the Green offense against Harvard in the Stadium tomorrow. Forrest Branch, Medford, Green pivot and dynamo of the eleven, is shown below. Fishman is the big threat of the Indians. He's been flitting through Green foes like a will o' the wisp. If his pals will give him some protection, Dartmouth may score often against the Crimson gridmen.

The Football Roundup

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PITTSBURGH.—There wasn't a Carnegie Tech football player left in town after the Tartans left to meet Notre Dame at South Bend Saturday. Instead of choosing a squad for the trip Coach Bob Waddell merely took along all of the 32 available varsity men.

NEW BRUNSWICK.—Holy Cross plays have brought a lot of headaches for the Rutgers varsity this week but it may be just the way Ike Paul, sophomore back on the subs, runs them. The reserves scored three times on the regulars yesterday and Paul was responsible for two touchdowns, running 30 yards for one and passing to Palmer for another.

NEW YORK.—According to past records Colgate and New York University ought to play a close game Saturday. In five previous encounters there has been only one lopsided score and two games were tied.

PRINCETON.—Princeton is looking for a few good reserve backs and surely ought to find a couple in the group that worked out yesterday. Including the regulars there were James, Kadlic, Purnell, Bales, Knell, McPartland, Halton, Craig, V'ardell, Johnston and Coggeshall, eleven in all.

MIDDLETOWN, Oct. 21 (INS).—Wesleyan's varsity football team had completed its work preparatory to Saturday's game against Amherst. Coach Jim Oberlander has rounded out the team into a smooth-working machine ready for a great fight. Nothing but light drill was ordered for today.

Harvard's oft rested starting eleven will be called on to become an iron man group against the Indians of Dartmouth tomorrow at the Stadium.

An added factor entered into the situation today which lowered the Crimson replacement strength a great deal when Johnny Crickard [illegible] lad, who has been going great guns as Jack Crickard's [illegible] at left halfback, was declared to be in no condition to play tomorrow by Dr. August [illegible] team physician [illegible] to the [illegible].

CASEY TO OPEN UP

Wet or dry, the Crimson is going to branch out with its full bloomed attack against the Indians. Casey has no hopes that the simple, straight game employed by the team in its preliminary games is going to work against a veteran combination such as Cannell has at Dartmouth.

AN OPEN LETTER TO BINGHAM AND HARVARD

MAINE TITLE SERIES OPENS TOMORROW

By BILL GRIMES

Just because Harvard and Dartmouth will crash on the banks of the Charles, and Yale and Army meet in New Haven don't let anyone tell you that all of the northern interest in New England college football is centered around the Stadium and Bowl conflicts.

Tomorrow will also mark the opening of the state championship round robin in Maine. And anytime Maine, Bates, Bowdoin and Colby engage in title warfare, as far as the Pine Tree State enthusiasts are concerned nothing else in the gridiron line matters.

The Maine institutions are not represented by such finished football products or machines as those of larger colleges and universities but there is no section in the country where the rivalry is keener and football games harder fought.

MAINE DEFENDS TITLE

The University of Maine is the defending champion and will again open the state series with Bates at Orono. As was the case a year ago, Dave Morey's team, by virtue of its tie with Yale, is favored to win. In order not to be caught napping again, Bates will watch Don Favor closely tomorrow afternoon to avoid, if possible, a repetition of Favor's run, which cost them the title last year.

For the first time in years Bowdoin expects to figure in the championship race. Since Charley Bowser succeeded Mal Morrow as head coach at Brunswick, Bowdoin has won only one state game. But judging from the Williams and Tufts games, the Black and White is represented by its strongest aggregation in years. Bowdoin will go to Waterville tomorrow and should have little trouble disposing of Eddie Roundy's Colby outfit.

The undefeated Tufts eleven tackles Brown, the conquerors of Yale tomorrow at Providence. Coach D. O. "Tuss" McLaughry has announced that there will be no Brown second team starters against Tufts and that the Bears will meet the Jumbos with everything they have.

"LITTLE 3" SERIES OPENS

Wesleyan and Amherst will open the Little Three series at Middletown and Lord Jeffrey's apostles are slight favorites to take the measure of Jim Oberlander's ministers.

Massachusetts State College hopes to shake Louis Bush loose to score a few touchdowns against Worcester Polytech at Amherst tomorrow.

At Durham, the University of New Hampshire and University of Vermont game should attract a large gathering as the teams are about evenly matched but Middlebury, three time winner of the Green Mountain State championship has a pushover in Ithaca College, while Norwich must step to beat the Coast Guard Academy at Northfield.

Of the four New England colleges that will appear on gridirons beyond the boundaries of this section, Holy Cross appears to be the only likely winner. The Crusaders are down in New Brunswick, N. J. marking time for their annual tilt with Rutgers and should come through almost as handily as they did a year ago, when they defeated the wearers of the scarlet 27 to 0 at Worcester.

The Golden Avalanche representing Marquette University is favored to win over Boston College in Milwaukee, Boston University is in for a shellacking by Geneva at Beaver Falls, and it is only a question of how many touchdowns Columbia will beat Williams by in New York.

About Those Football Prices--- Why Not Slash 'Em Tomorrow?

Mr. William J. Bingham, Director of Athletics, Harvard University:

Following your statement to the effect that the price of football tickets are in for further reductions, the Boston Evening American conducted a little survey of its own of the price situation in various commodities, including pleasure.

"Depends on Game"

Edward E. Nazzaro, 75 State St. Stock Broker

"I've just bought four tickets for the Dartmouth game tomorrow. The price, $4.40 a ticket, may seem unreasonably high to some. Personally, I think the game is worth that price. A good game, in other words is well worth a good price of admission. Other games, other prices."

Edward E. Nazzaro

Leslie J. Gilbride, Roslindale Attorney

"The tariff charged for tickets at the Stadium and elsewhere for big football games may be necessary to the colleges, but would be much more acceptable to the general public at lower rates. Four dollars and 40 cents for a ticket, regardless of how good the seat you get may be, is a little out of keeping in these stringent times."

Leslie J. Gilbride

"$1.25 Tops Is Plenty"

Allen J. Lawson, Braintree Attorney (Harvard, '17)

"Very painful, to say the least I should much rather see the tickets scaled down to about $1.25 for a Harvard-Dartmouth game. At $4.40 they should close out the bowl and steel stands sections of the Stadium and give a couple of complimentary tickets to the fights. This would more or less approach value for money received."

Allen Lawson

We asked a cross section of the football attending public what it thought about ticket prices. You and the public are unanimous—ticket prices should come down. The public has known it for three years. But it took you, Mr. Bingham, that much longer to find it out.

Everywhere we heard the same story; everything the football public buys is down about 40 percent of its price, say four years ago. The clothes it wears, the automobiles it rides in, the food it eats, and the other diversions for which it buys tickets, everything has taken a very substantial slice in the outlay asked.

Everything, that is, but the price of football tickets for the big games.

And now, as you probably suspect, it seems to be a golden egg that is rapidly killing the goose.

Elsewhere you will find the opinions of half a dozen football fans, all agreeing with you that football prices are hard to take. We interviewed many more than these. Everyone said the same thing—it's time football took the rap with everything else.

Aside from the money question in the survey, we discovered that football is losing none of its hold on the public fancy. You may have thought so from the attendance figures at the Stadium this season. The fact remains the public still likes to see a game. But not at the current prices.

It is recalled that football at Harvard will earn an estimated $750,000 this season. This is doing very well, indeed. But at lower prices you would have many more people in the Stadium than you are going to get this year.

A lot more people, in short, would show a lot more interest at a lot less prices. And think of the pleasure it would afford them this year, when laughs are scarce at any price.

"How About Girls?"

John L. Foley, Dorchester Statistician (Harvard, '30)

"A very crucial situation for the young college graduate. Paying $4.40 for a Dartmouth ticket is doing things in the 1928 manner, to which we are becoming mercifully unaccustomed. There are, furthermore, two sides to this question for most of us. How about the girls we might like to take? I could show you statistics . . ."

John L. Foley

"Price Is Too Steep"

Jack Shaughnessy, Dedham Sporting Goods Salesman

"Most people, you will find, hesitate to tell Harvard its business, but they would all welcome a reduction in the price of football tickets. If Mr. Bingham thinks the price of football tickets will come down, he is probably speaking with authority. Interest in football is as high as ever, but attendance is another thing again. The price is too steep."

Jack Shaughnessy

Charles J. Perotti, Waban, Stock Broker.

"At $4.40 a ticket, the big Harvard games are still beyond the reach of your ardent football fan, General Public. Few entertainments can be so attractive as to charge this price. And certainly the first row in the steel stands isn't worth as much as a seat on the 50-yard line. I'm going to the game, just the same."

Charles Perotti

Isn't it time Harvard, too, remembered the Forgotten Fan?

And, Mr. Bingham (and Harvard), why not start your price cutting with the Dartmouth game tomorrow? Would that inconvenience you too much?

EAGLE SQUAD ARRIVES IN MILWAUKEE

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 21—The Boston College Eagles swooped down on this city this morning after a long train ride all in fine spirits and ready for the game tomorrow with Coach Frank Murray's Marquette University eleven.

The Boston boys are scheduled to report at the Marquette Field this afternoon for a workout during which they will experience their first contact work since last Monday, no scrimmage was possible in Boston because of a three-day rain.

McKENNEY WORRIED

That McKenney is worried over the defensive power of Marquette was evidenced in his plans to have strictly offense drill for the most part this afternoon. He spent most of the trip explaining the Marquette plays for the benefit of the squad.

One of the untested backs who may star for the Eagles is Ben Moynihan, former freshman star and a former New York City schoolboy ace, who joined the squad only a few days ago. He went so well in practice that he earned the trip to Milwaukee over several other backs of longer experience.

Coach Murray of Marquette is a Bay State product, hailing from Maynard, Mass. He never played football in his life and yet has built the Marquette football team into one of the most powerful in the Mid-West. He will field seven veterans from the last season's campaign in the East, where they took the Boston team into camp by the narrow margin of 7-0. The Eagles were at that time crippled to the extent that two star ball carriers were forced to watch the game from the sidelines.

B. C. SEEKS FIRST WIN

Should B. C. win the game tomorrow it will be its first win ever over Marquette in a series which dates back eight years and may prove the tonic that will spur the Maroon and Gold to a victory over the Fordham eleven next week in Boston.

"We are both entering the game unaware of the true strength of the other team," said McKenney today. "We have not played since the game with the Praying Colonels and Marquette has not played for almost two weeks. Anything can happen."

Thug Saves Kid Being Robbed by Brakeman

Kid McCoy was a throwback. For, son of a deeply religious man, he ran away from home and became a hobo. A rapid rise from poverty to riches a few years later, and subsequent slide down the scale made his life a colorful stretch through the years. Consequently the Kid's life story, appearing daily in the Boston Evening American, makes an absorbing tale. Follow this exclusive feature in these pages.

By KID McCOY

As Told to Lee J. Smits

CHAPTER V

THERE was the brakeman, lantern on the box car floor, hands high in the air, and a big revolver shoved against his ribs. When I got in the car I hadn't seen the man lying in a dark corner, the man who had sprung to my rescue with such a flourish.

"You would pick on a kid," he said.

He robbed the brakeman of $7 and his gold watch. He held him until the train was in motion, and then motioned him to go. After another glance at the man with the gun, I went with the brakeman.

That was a funny business, come to think of it. One minute the brakeman is going through my clothes, the next we are both headed back to the caboose away from the murderous looking ruffian in the box car.

Wins Police Sympathy

In Cheyenne I walked straight to a sporting hangout, Harry Hynds' restaurant and gambling house. I ate until the tab was $2.40. I remember starting off with a Welsh rarebit and winding up with an enormous steak. I told the man in charge that I was broke, and what was he going to do about it!

My question was answered by a big policeman, stepping in the door at the instant. He took charge of me. I explained to him that I was from Baltimore, and that he had no doubt read of the death of my father, a policeman who had been killed the week before last in a fight with burglars.

That copper had a heart. He took me to a hotel, fixed me up with a room and gave me 50 cents. Furthermore, he was a friend of Hynds and told him of the incident.

The restaurant manager, according to Hynds' ethics, would have been justified in beating my head off for the $2.40, or in okaying the tab and giving me a dollar or so, but not in turning me over to the law. So he fired the man, and gave me his job.

Accumulates Grudge

Hynds and I spoke the same language. He recognized me as a drifter, and that was the free, old West, where a rambling rake like myself was at home. For 10 days I worked in the restaurant, and when I told Hynds good-bye there was no scolding or preaching. He knew my kind. In later years Harry and I became real friends.

I floated along to Salt Lake and hooked up with Dave Reece, the Montana Kid, a fighter of some local fame. He was staging a sneak fight, and put me on the door. The admission was $2 and I had taken in $50 when the cops swamped the place.

I held the door against them long enough for the principals to make their getaway, and when they crashed it my right wrist was cut deep by broken plate glass. I went to the drug store and got the wound dressed and kept on going with the $50. I still have a scar as a souvenir of that incident.

Seven miles out in the country George La Blanche had his training camp. He was the fighting marine that had licked the original Jack Dempsey, the Nonpareil. I strolled into his training quarters and with my left hand was jabbing the punching bag when La Blanche spied me.

"Get out of here, you so and so," he yelled.

I went on my way, the face of La Blanche printed on my memory. I had a grudge to pay off and years later, when I was meeting all comers on the road, who hopped onto the stage in Dayton, Ohio, but the unsuspecting Mr. La Blanche.

Well—before I gave it to him I said

"Remember the skinny kid you drove out of your camp in Cheyenne years ago?"

Now my goal was San Francisco, where Jim Corbett was to fight Peter Jackson in the Olympic Club in May, 1891. I was 19 and all I dreamed and thought was fighting, fighting.

B. U. GRIDMEN WORK OUT AT PITTSBURGH

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 21 — Boston University football party of 30 arrived here this morning and went directly to their hotel quarters to rest after their 17-hour train ride.

This afternoon, the Terriers will go to the Duquesne University to go through a signal drill and kicking practice as a final tune-up for their game against Geneva at Beaver Falls, tomorrow.

Duquesne extended the use of its field because of the friendship between Elmer Laydon, head grid coach at the university, and John "Tiny" MacManmon, Boston University's line coach. Both played on the famous Notre Dame team of 1924. Laydon was one of the "Four Horsemen" and MacManmon was one of the "Seven Mules."

CALL DUE TOMORROW

Hod Call, regular tackle, and Charles Glauque, director of athletics, were the only members of the party missing. Both had to remain in Boston yesterday and they are leaving today and will arrive at Beaver Falls tomorrow at noon.

Coach Lane decided definitely to start Danny Harrington, who has starred at guard for two seasons, at left end to bolster the wings, for Geneva is reputed to have a fast, tricky team. From reports which the Boston mentor has received the opposition will try end arounds, end runs and passes all afternoon.

ALIBERTI AT GUARD

This type of offense necessitates good ends and as the B. U. wing berths have been weak all season Lane feels that he can strengthen his team considerably by placing Danny at one of the wings.

Al Aliberti, husky 190-pound guard, will start in Harrington's old place.

Manchester Gets N.E. Amateur Title Golf

The New England amateur golf championship for next year has been awarded to the Manchester, N. H. Country Club, according to an announcement made after the annual meeting of the association held at the Winchester C. C.

TUFTS READY FOR BROWN

The Tufts grid squad is in tip-top shape today as it holds its last practice before going to Providence tomorrow to take on the strong Brown team which licked Yale last week, 7-2.

The Jumbos have a minimum of fear of the Bruins. They have already licked one team which tied Yale this year and feel they can take the Providence eleven as easily as they whipped Bates.

Should the field at Providence be muddy the services of Sammy Clayman may be lost for the star quarterback is still favoring his strained ankle.

Temporary Seats in World Series Cost Cubs' Money

Chicago, Oct. 21 (AP)—After looking over the financial report of the Chicago Cubs' end of the World Series, William L. Veeck, president of the club, favors a change in the system of disposing of series tickets.

The plan of selling seats for three games, he says, kept customers away, and he favors disposing of them for a single game if the trade wants it that way.

The temporary bleachers built over streets adjacent to Wrigley field for the series, failed to turn up a profit. They were filled two days, bringing in about $20,000 which however, did not meet the cost of construction insurance and ushering.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

LOOKS AS IF the New York Garden has signed Max Baer and Primo Carnera to clash in December.

Jimmy Johnston's telegram to Baer, in which he promises to make Max world's champion, if he goes under the management of the Boy Bandit's brother, Charley indicates this fact.

Mr. Boston

When I first read Johnston's telegram offering to receive Baer of all his managerial troubles I was inclined to figure that the Garden's match maker was a bit out-of-step. It appeared on the surface as if he were trying to secure control of another boxer with his brother Charley as front man.

Then I noticed Johnston gave his own telegram in New York. I know Jimmy well enough to give him credit for being smart in the affairs of the ring. He probably wouldn't raise any objections to taking over control of Baer, but he doesn't bare his hand in telegram when he really means business.

Johnston realizes that the press will condemn him for using his position as matchmaker of the New York Garden to line up a star fighter for his brother, Charley and will keep Baer very much in the news.

Baer Is Promising

WHEN THE RODEO and other shows complete their appearances at the Garden, Johnston will then be ready to tip the world he has signed Baer and Carnera.

Of course if Baer should insist that Charley Johnston join his present staff of managers you can not imagine the Johnston brothers saying NO. Baer is one of the best of the American heavyweights and his future is still in front of him.

Anybody who underrates Johnston's ability as a director of publicity should note how much money he picked up with Phil Scott, Mike McTigue and other fighters who were supposed to be through when they went under his management.

As for Baer, he takes his orders from Ancil Hoffman. The other managers haven't got a vote. One of them however has an order from the California courts giving him 25 cents of every dollar Max earns.

WINSTON DEMANDS SHOT AT CARNERA HERE

GIMME THAT EYETALIEN, HE GRINS

BY JACK CONWAY

Unknown Winston, following his smashing victory over Ernie Schaaf in a 10-round bout at the Arena, today opened fire on Primo Carnera.

"I am ready to sign Winston for a bout with Carnera to be staged any place in America," said Dennis McMahon, manager of Wiston. "I believe Winston's punching bility gives him a chance of licking any man in the world.

"Winston will improve as a boxer. When he masters a few more of the fine points of the game he will become a challenger for Jack Sharkey's title."

Winston was at Hartford, Ct., today, where he was given a fine reception. "Gimme that big Fyetalian next," he told his admirers.

Schaaf received $3745 for his end of the purse, which represented a 35 per cent cut of the $10,700 gate. Winston got $2140, which was 20 per cent of the gate.

These men have already met twice. Schaaf won the first bout by a knockout in five rounds.

Winston was obliged to furnish the greatest battle of his career to get the duke over Schaaf. The milling was so close that the decision could have gone either way.

Winston's aggressiveness and cleaner punching at long range was probably what won for him the decision.

SEE-SAW BATTLE

It was one of those battles w[illegible] first one then the other was out front. Going into the tenth round I thought Schaaf had a slight lead. Then Winston cut loose with a rally which sent him blazing down the home stretch at a terrific clip. It was this surge that won for him the decision.

Winston's victory was popular with the 9000 fans, who gave the Argonne Club a net gate of $10,700 after payment of the federal and state taxes. The Negro heavyweight made a courageous stand under Schaaf's furious drives, stood toe to toe with Ernie in the center of the ring and traded blows and came down the wire like a thoroughbred.

Schaaf had an advantage of 22½ pounds in weight. Ernie scaled 206 pounds against 183½ for Winston.

This weight margin gave Schaaf a tremendous advantage when at close quarters. At long range Winston did better. He outboxed Schaaf and scored with clean punches to the head and body.

UNKNOWN STARTS SLOWLY

In the early stages of the bout it looked as if Schaaf would be an easy winner. Winston didn't look very good as Ernie hammered away at his mid section. As the bout progressed, Schaaf tired, while Winston gained in confidence. On one occasion, Schaaf was first to clinch following a furious exchange of blows. In the sixth and seventh rounds Winston looked particularly good when he scored heavily with clean hard shots to the head and body.

Winston's victory was a boost for boxing. Before the bout there were numerous ugly rumors to the effect that the Negro was going to go into the tank for Schaaf. Some of the so-called wise men were even naming the round when Schaaf would win.

The furious battle with the Winston victory proved that the contest was fought on its merits.

QUICK KNOCKOUT

Victor [illegible] of Marlboro came from behind with a fiery barrage of blows to beat Billy Nevins of Cambridge in six rounds.

When Manny Davis, a colored heavyweight stepped into the ring to battle Tiger Henderson of Cambridge, he didn't think everything was according to Hoyle.

"That's Winston," Manny told his handlers.

It was necessary to convince Davis he was boxing Henderson before the bout started.

Henderson won in three rounds. Referee O'Connor stopped the bout when Davis kept running away. Manny was outclassed and knew it.

Willy Callahan Goes in N. Bedford Scrap

Callahan and Mignault are light heavies, and each has a large following among southern Massachusetts fans.

McCarron Not Entered

Jimmy McCarron wants to tell the world that he is not entered in the Suffolk County V. F. W. amateur ring show of Monday evening at the Arena. It had been announced that Jimmy would box in the 135-pound class.

CRUCIAL GAMES FACE BIG 10

Chicago, Oct. 22 (INS)—Civil warfare continues unabated in the ranks of the Big Ten tomorrow when traditional rivals meet in mid-October games that normally would be classified as late November tidbits.

CHICAGO THREATENED

Chicago begins its conference schedule and the Maroons have a tartar in Indiana for their initial encounter.

EASY FOR MICHIGAN

Michigan's fine team looks to be much too strong for Zuppke's sophomore Illini squad.

MINN. POWERFUL

Word drifts in from the North that coach Bierman is driving his Gophers along at a terrific rate and that a marked improvement is being shown as a result. This Minnesota squad has the man power and once they get going their opponents are going to feel the sting.

GIVES PURDUE EDGE

Northwestern faces the problem of stopping the hardest set of backs in the conference when it meets Purdue.

Northwestern's line, which is supposed to be its weakest link, has looked extremely well on defense to date. However, it is certainly true that it has not been forced to look upon as compact and as versatile attack as that boasted by Purdue.

Eight Races for Middies Crews

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 21 (AP) — One of the most extensive crew schedules which the Navy has attempted in recent years has been prepared by Comdr. J. L. Hall, Jr., graduate manager of athletics at the United States Naval Academy.

Winston's Natural Too Much for Magic Coin

The magic coin picked Ernie Schaaf to beat Winston. But when Winston started whispering to "Little Joe," the magic coin was licked.

If this fellow Winston doesn't stop upsetting the dope, some of the speculative gentlemen, who keep the wolf off the front lawn by trying to call them right, will be looking for new fields of endeavor.

Unknown Winston's Life Story in American Monday

The strange, colorful life story of Unknown Winston, conqueror of Ernie Schaaf, will begin in the Boston Evening American next Monday.

Winston is the greatest colored heavyweight to come to the front since Jack Sharkey knocked Harry Wills, the Black Menace, out of the fistic picture.

Winston has a punch and the sparkle that gives him crowd appeal. He has fought his way to the front against tremendous odds. He came on to lick Schaaf when he was supposed to be just another fighter. His punch knocked over Walter Cobb and Billy Jones. That enabled him to conquer Schaaf.

The first article of the amazing story of Unknown Winston will appear in Monday's Boston Evening American. Don't miss it.

TRAFFIC RULES FOR H.-D. GAME

Here are the police traffic regulations published for the benefit of football fans who will be flooding through Harvard sq. and over the Larz Anderson Bridge to the Harvard Stadium tomorrow by the thousands to watch the Crimson and Dartmouth do battle.

North Harvard st. and Soldiers Field rd. flanking the Stadium are forbidden areas for vehicular traffic as are Boylston st., Memorial Drive, Eliot st., Winthrop st. and South st. So don't try to drive through in your car.

Parking is forbidden on the following roadways, although with the exception of North Harvard and Boylston sts., open to traffic—North Harvard st., Western ave., Spurr st., Franklin st., Lincoln st. and Boylston st.

Automobiles wishing to park in the H. A. A. space are requested to enter from Western ave., which will be open to traffic all day.

The police and traffic departments of the City of Boston have specially requested that all automobiles going to or from the Stadium avoid passing through Governor sq.

BATTLES NEW TRIBE GENERAL

After three days of experimenting with his first string backfield Coach Lud Wray of the Braves has decided to interchange the grid roles of Henry Hughes, the Hawaiian quarterback, and Gip Battles, West Virginian Wesleyan star, who is doing well as halfback.

In fact, Coach Wray has decided to put the field generalship up to Battles for the tilt with the Giants in New York next Sunday.

Hughes will retain his place in the first string backfield, where he will be needed as a good blocking back for carriers Pinckert, Musick and the now created quarterback Battles.

Sing Sing Ace Lands Pro Grid Job

New York, Oct. 21 (AP) — "Jumbo" (Powerhouse) Marino, voted of all his capable class-mates the man likely to succeed, crashed the line for dear old Sing Sing yesterday, and last night the name of the great football hero rang high through the cloistered halls of the ancient institution by the banks of the placid Hudson.

There may be a depression, work may be scarce, but not for "Jumbo" Marino. Turned away from the walls of his alma mater only a few hours, the swarthy fullback of the Green and White plunged into the game of life—and came up with a job playing professional football for the Paterson (N. J.) Night Hawks in the Eastern League.

Jumbo aspired for a few hours to the ranks of the "Big League," the New York Giants, or the Brooklyn Dodgers in the National League. But after due thought he put that aside.

"After all," he decided, "these other guys'll be tough enough for a start. It ain't like working out on cops."

Heuser to Battle Nichols at Next Argonne Show

Adolph Heuser, German light heavyweight, and George Nichols recognized as world's light heavyweight champion by the National Boxing Association, have been signed to meet at an Argonne A. A. show at the Arena on October 28. Steve Halaiko will oppose Pancho Villa in the semifinal.

5000 LOOK ON AS BRUINS WORK

Quebec, Oct. 21 — Close to 5000 Quebec fans jammed the Arena here to watch the Boston Bruins and the Bruin Cubs open practice in a three-hour conditioning drill.

Only Eddie Shore and Nelson Stewart were missing when the Bruins assembled around the Chateau Frontenac training table. Nels had been expected late yesterday afternoon, but Art Ross said Shore would not appear until Monday.

There were three groups in the workout and each practised over half hour periods the art of fast starting, stopping on the whistle, reverse skating.

LORD JEFF ACE READY TO GO

Amherst, Oct. 21—Hal Warner backfield ace, of the Lord Jeffs will play tomorrow when Amherst meets Wesleyan at Middletown, Ct. Warner was hurt in the battle with Princeton and wasn't out until a couple of days ago.

Vets Hold Show at Arena Monday

When the Suffolk County Council, V. F. W., stages its amateur boxing show and entertainment at the Boston Arena Monday night it will be a get-together the like of which the old troopers can recall during the war days when much of their recreation composed of boxing bouts for the company, regimental or divisional championships.

The long grind in those days was broken up with such entertainment with which the troops sitting around, smoking and yelling their encouragement to their favorites, while a visiting band dropped in to further liven up the affair.

These scenes will be reacted when the veterans stage their first amateur show for charity. The boxers will compete in six classes.

Miss Madison to Test Four Swim Records

Agua Caliente, Mex., Oct. 21 (INS)—Helene Madison, Seattle, Wash., who sacrificed her myriads of amateur records to turn pro, today was scheduled to attempt to break four world's records, the 50, 60, 75 and 100-yard swims, here Sunday—after which she will be presented with the keys to Agua Caliente, Tijuana and San Diego.

PERES SLIGHT CHOICE OVER FITTONS

The Pere Marquettes will go into their game Sunday with the Fittons at Braves Field a 5-4 favorite but one of the most grueling games ever played between these teams in their 12-year rivalry is expected.

Heard and Overheard

Alan Dinehart has been signed for the lead in "The Quitter," which Roy Neill directs for Columbia. Jo Swerling of the Columbia writing staff is writing a yarn based on the Insull debacle which won't present the [illegible] utilities magnate in any too favorable light. Writer Lowell Hughes has been signed by Fox. Charlie Chase, who's been one of Hal Roach's comedy stars for years, will direct the next Thelma Todd-ZaSu Pitts laugh riot for Roach. Thelma is at present recuperating from a serious operation.

This and That

Maurice Chevalier sails for America Nov. 2. His first will be "The Way to Love," and inasmuch as Herr Lubitsch has just departed Europeward, it looks as if Maurice will have to try his luck with a brand new director. B. P. Schulberg has borrowed Sheila Terry from Warners for the second lead in "Madame Butterfly." I'm told Warners call Miss Terry their Joan Crawford, but I'll keep an open mind in the matter, anyway. Also slated for "Madame Butterfly" is Sander Kallay, young Hungarian actor from the Pasadena community playhouse, who has just been signed by Paramount. Emma Dunn, Claire Dodd and Jobyna Howland have been given tickets for "The Inside," Cagny's first. Warners have purchased "Lilly Turner," the Phillip Dunning-George Abbot play, with Barbara Stanwyck in mind. The Dunning-Abbott duo was responsible for "Broadway."

Story Has Many Authors

Paramount has purchased the right to a Universal story titled "Passage to Paradise." Yarn will appear first in serial form in a well-known weekly. Taking the skeleton of a story by Polan Banks as a basis, Rupert Hughes, Zane Grey, Vina Delmar, Irvin Cobb, Gertrude Atherton and other famous fictionists have each written a chapter, with Banks authoring the final instalment. When "Passage to Paradise" appears later as a Paramount feature it will have more distinguished names among its story credits than any other film on record. Howarth Bromley helped negotiate the deal with Paramount.

Globe Trotter

First pictures of the devastation wrought by the recent earthquake in Greece in which more than 300 persons lost their lives are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News with a vivid description by The Globe Trotter. Only the ruined shells remain on the sites of many ancient towns. Hundreds of women and children left homeless by the disaster are shown being fed by the relief workers while doctors and nurses care for the wounded.

Heyburn Given "Shantytown" Film Role

By HARRIET PARSONS

Copyright, 1932 by Universal Service Inc.

Los Angeles, Calif., Oct. 21.—Weldon Heyburn, who was much publicized "another Clark Gable," is definitely set for the lead opposite Mary Pickford in "Shantytown." Instead of a contract just for the one picture, he'll be given a long-term ticket.

Mary has liked the idea of Heyburn as a leading man for some time. In fact, she had tests made of him at the Long Island studios when she was casting "Coquette."

Harriet Parsons

Big Lumbering Karl Dane, who's been absent from the Hollywood scene for some time, will play Ole Oleson in "Shantytown." The definite selection for a leading man for the Pickford film deprives us news hounds of what was beginning to look like a perennial standby. Whenever things were slack we could always rumor a new possible leading man for "Shantytown." Ah well, there's still "Laughing Boy."

More Bull Pictures

Latest theme to intrigue the makers of movies seems to be bull fighting. United Artists is kidding the subject with Eddie Cantor's "Kid From Spain," and Universal will treat it seriously in "Men Without Fear," starring vehicle for Lew Ayres. And now the Spanish influence has hit Paramount, too. Para announces "The Trumpet Blows," a bull fight yarn about a father and son, for George Raft. Oliver H. P. Garrett is adapting. Raft will make "The Trumpet Blows" after he finishes "Undercover Man," which is now in production, and "Pickup."

[A]ROUND THE THEAT[E]RS WITH And by Nicholas Young ∾ Harleigh Schultz COMMENTS ON FILM BILLS

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

With his usual facility of movement, J. J. Shubert, of the [i]mportant Shuberts, has slipped into town and out. The visita[ti]on was strictly commercial in import, but there was also in the [g]rim background of this business man the high flavor of an [i]mpresario about to launch the season's most important operet[t]a. It has already been mentioned, and freely speculated upon, [t]hat Mr. Shubert will present his musical version of "Cyrano de Bergerac" at the Colonial Theater. With the usual indecision of producers in new ventures the opening date has been variously published. Mr. Shubert now insists that "Cyrano" will take the Colonial stage on Friday evening, November 4. That point, [h]e insists, is settled.

But other things have interested Mr. Shubert in Boston, and these are chiefly concerned with business conditions. We may quote him between trains.

J. J. Shubert

"If theater box offices are any barometer of general business," he said, "and I think they are, then Boston is one of the most prosperous cities in the country today."

Of course, as everyone must know, prosperity is relative, but it has remained for Mr. Shubert to localize it. Then he continued:

"Week after week, since the beginning of the season, Boston has been leading the country in attendance and support of the legitimate theater. That is why I have chosen Boston for the premiere of 'Cyrano de Bergerac.' This, you must know, or should quickly suspect, is a musical version of Rostand's famous story, and I am sure it will find a place beside 'The Student Prince' and 'Blossom Time,' in the affection of music lovers."

It may be remarked in passing that "Cyrano" was tried out during the past summer at the Municipal Opera in St. Louis and it played, as the story goes, even better than its sponsors had hoped—or even expected. Mr. Shubert, by long training in the ups and downs of theatrical enterprise, is never exuberant, but he made it more than clear that, in his opinion, Boston has become the ace city of the nation in good theater and that "Cyrano" is sure to find a secure setting among the best of our operettas.

Pulpits to Miss Him

As Richard B Harrison of "The Green Pastures" remarks to Gabriel, being the Lawd is no easy job. This will be better understood when it is known that during the seven weeks of the run of this play at the Colonial Mr. Harrison has been called upon to fill an average of two evangelical pulpits each Sunday, preaching good Calvinistic sermons and exhorting the multitude to be good. The churches are going to miss Mr. Harrison when "The Green Pastures" folds up its tents in another week and departs for regions unknown; the churches are also going to look with solemn, unhappy faces into the contribution boxes. The reason is clear—positively plain. Whenever Mr. Harrison is announced as the man in the pulpit, attendance leaps upward; when the well-known organ offertory is played, not only the regulars but the visitors dig into their pockets. It would not be fair to call it a racket, but the results speak for themselves. When Harrison preaches he draws earnest Christian crowds and they respond manfully when the deacons march down the aisles making the regular Sunday collections.

Students Hear Him

During the present run of "The Green Pastures," Mr. Harrison, beside his regular Sunday pulpit appearances, has addressed audiences at Harvard University, has delivered three lectures before the undergraduates of Boston University, has made an address before the Women's City Club, and presided over one meeting at Tremont Temple at which more than 500 people were turned away. Voluntary contributions galloped skyward under this pressure; more churches than could be taken into "The Green Pastures" list of outside operations pleaded for "De Lawd" as an added attraction. No actor in this generation has done so much to fill empty pews as Richard B. Harrison; no actor in this generation has done more, or could do more, to draw the better elements of society into the theater.

Theater Folk on Club Program in Allston

Theater folk are lending aid in the way of talent to an event at the Brighthelmstone Club in Cambridge st., Allston, tonight, at 8 30. The program is scheduled to include luminaries from stage and radio.

[F]ILMLAND BEQUEATHES TERPSICHORE TO THE FOOTLIGHTS

Lina Basquette will trip it on the light fantastic, at RKO Keith's, where she is one of the big features in the stage show beginning tomorrow. As movie fans know, Mlle. Lina got her fame in the films. She is now a star in the troupe known as the "Hollywood Aristocrats."

Music Master

Walter Mayo is handling the baton at the RKO Boston and his orchestra has been one of the features of recent shows, [its] selections winning applause due to the appropriateness of the program and the excellence of the band. Mayo graduated from Boston College in 1923, and was soloist and band leader with various organizations. After a swing into Keith vaudeville, he tied up with the Keith theaters in 1924. Before being promoted to director at the Boston, he was assistant to Larry Flint, now music director at Keith's.

Walter Mayo

Mildred Harris Chaplin on Bill

Mildred Harris Chaplin, comedienne and singer, in her own right, will be a special attraction next week at the Old Howard. She was born almost in the shadow of a film studio, in California, and while a child made her debut in the silent pictures. It was then discovered that she had a musical voice and she was trained as a singer.

Vaudeville

Pat Henry with her "Southern Rebels" top the RKO Boston vaudeville bill tomorrow. The Three Rixfords in "Athletic Charm"; Helen Honan and Helen Arden, songs and satire; William Sully and Genevieve Houghton in "A Revue for Two"; and Eddie Hanley with Frank Duke, Sally Maison and Charles Lock in "Anything for Laughs," are others on the bill.

Dartmouth Night at Loew's State

It's Dartmouth night at Loew's State tonight. The entire football squad will be guests of Manager Joseph H. Brennan for the first Boston screening of the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture "Faithless," starring Tallulah Bankhead and Robert Montgomery. Miss Bankhead has been voted the favorite screen actress at Hanover.

Metropolitan Theater

The schedule for "Fifty Million Frenchmen," featured on the Met stage today, follows: p. m., 12 35, 3 30, 6 25 and 9 20.

Big Names of Radio Make Hit of "The Big Broadcast," Held for Second Week

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Two items rise to the surface on the day's film news locally—one concerns "The Big Broadcast," at the Paramount and Uptown, and the other deals with Katharine Hepburn, appearing in support of John Barrymore in "A Bill of Divorcement," coming to RKO Keith's tomorrow.

You never can tell about these films—sometimes it's just too bad for good pictures, and often poor photoplays get the most unexpected breaks. Reviewing "The Big Broadcast" last Saturday, we wrote our judgment of the movie, setting it down as a mere assortment of "shorts" and yet very likely to prove a box office "wow" because of the galaxy of radio stars it reveals before the microphone, in the course of its weak plot. It turns out that "The Big Broadcast" is clicking along so strongly that it is to held over a second week.

Katharine Hepburn

The public taste is a good deal of a will o' the wisp to the movie men at best. Their noses are incessantly in the wind, but often they miss the veering of the public's favor. For the most part picture producers are takers of chances. Now, in the light of the success of "The Big Broadcast," who can predict the "flop"? Incidentally, the film, among the talkies, gives sharpest point to the fact that you never can tell—well, anyway, hardly ever!

But give the hold-over its fullest due: it does have the box office names from radioland. Batches of air talent all doing nicely, and heartily applauded. In truth more plaudits are forthcoming during a showing of this movie than any photoplay we can remember. Showing, perhaps, that the public is glad of the opportunity to anticipate television, and see on the Paramount and Uptown screens just how their favorites work and look in the broadcasting chambers.

Now as to Katharine Hepburn, suddenly lifted to stardom eligibility by the "discovery" of her merit in the new Keith feature. The story we are going to tell, has not, so far as we know, been hitherto printed in a newspaper. It seems that three years ago she was playing a very "lean" part in a Broadway show, in fact, she had but three lines to speak. But she did these so well that a man, to whom we may refer as a scout, touted her in highest terms to a higher-up.

But that higher-up poohpoohed the suggestion that the lass had the everything of promise. Thus was Miss Hepburn's career kept marking time for quite a while.

Now, at last, she is made—they're going to star her soon

REYNOLDS KIN WANT WHOLE CASE ENDED

By JOSEPH COWAN

Winston-Salem, N. C., Oct. 21—There can be no question about the desire of the Reynolds family to have the State of North Carolina drop the prosecution of Libby Holman Reynolds and Ab Walker as quickly as possible. And they want to have it dropped for all time.

Both W. N. Reynolds, Smith's uncle and guardian, and Dick Reynolds, the dead boy's brother, today convinced me that every word in the letter the elder Reynolds wrote to State Solicitor Carlisle Higgins was meant to be read in that light alone.

If the murder indictment is not pressed, the Reynolds family will take no part in any further investigation. If Solicitor Higgins should impanel a jury and nolle prosse the charge for lack of evidence, that suits Smith's relatives. This must, of course, would constitute jeopardy under the law and Libby could never be prosecuted thereafter.

That would be quite all right with the family. They would like nothing better than to have the whole thing disposed of forever and as speedily as possible.

"My brother is dead and nothing can change it," said Dick. "A careful investigation has failed to produce sufficient evidence to prove he was murdered. So what is the use of going on with it? The sooner it is ended and forgotten, the better."

In all my conversations with the elder Reynolds and Dick I have never heard them say an unkind word about Libby. The impression I have is that they are not without a great deal of sympathy for her.

True, they doubt her story of a two-day lapse of memory, but they have never denounced her as a liar. They just can't believe it possible.

PASTOR EX-WIFE SAVED WEDS

Six weeks after his ex-wife had saved him from prosecution in New Bedford court for non-support, Rev. Herbert Hainer married his secretary, Miss Martha Lamond, 22, of New Bedford.

The pair were married secretly last Saturday in Hartford, it was learned today.

The pastoral and marital affairs of the Rev. Mr. Hainer have been in a tangle for the past two years. A year ago after resigning his pastorate, he secured a Reno divorce from his wife, Inez, on charges of mental cruelty.

When he returned to New Bedford in September he was arrested for non-support of his wife and ten-year-old son. His wife refused to prosecute, and he was released.

The Rev. Hainer married Inez Pool of Haverhill in 1913 when he was pastor of the South Christian Church there. He has since served as pastor in several denominations in Maine and New Bedford.

He is now making his home in Newark, N. J.

AT THE LITTLE UNITARIAN CHURCH in the historic old town of Concord at high noon on Saturday, Barbara Greenough, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry V. Greenough of Brookline, will be married to John Freeman Bradley, son of Mrs. Luther D. Bradley of Dover . . .

The Greenoughs have a summer place, Greenhold, in Carlisle, which is on the outskirts of Concord and it is there the wedding breakfast will be served and the reception will take place . . .

Miss Barbara is of the ninth generation of descendants of Peter Bulkley, the founder of the town of Concord, several of the members of whom have been ministers of the Gospel in the Unitarian Church in Concord . . .

BARBARA GREENOUGH

The Rev. Minot O. Simons of New York will attend as officiating clergyman, assisted by the Rev. E. P. Daniels, minister of the church in Concord. The Rev. Simons was the minister who married the parents of the bride a decade ago. . . .

Cousin Will Attend Her

THE ATTRACTIVE COUSIN OF the fair Barbara, Elizabeth B. McGinley, daughter of Mrs. Holden McGinley of Milton, will attend her as maid of honor . . . both of these girls were debutantes of last season and were among the most beautiful AND popular . . .

Out of town guests who will attend are Mr. and Mrs. B. P. Bole of Cleveland, Mr. and Mrs. Winsor White of Cleveland and Mr. Holden Guerdon . . .

Another Junior Leaguer of the past season, pretty Mary Cleveland of Concord, has entered the busy marts of trade . . . she is assisting at a smart uptown gown salon and will welcome her friends there . . .

Post-Deb Recovering From Accident

IT IS NICE TO LEARN THAT Beatrice DeMenocal, one of our favorite debs of last year, is recovering from a serious automobile accident in New York . . we hear that her heavy suitor, Phil Ladd of New York, was driving the car when it crashed . . .

Winthrop Lee, Jr., son of the Winthrop Lees of Concord, is a freshman at Harvard . . . debs please note.

Dorothea Newman and Faith Donaldson, who have been touring Scotland together, have left to study at the University of Geneva this winter . . . they attended a colorful Highland ball before they left which was attended by many of the Donaldson relations . . . they are VERY Scottish, you know!

In the year book of the British Ski Club we note the mention of the skiing camp of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Whytte (Catherine Robb) in the Canadian Rockies . . . it must be QUITE a place . . .

Needlework Guild to Hold Tea

THE COMMITTEE IN CHARGE of the junior department of the Needlework Guild are holding a tea on Monday, the 24th of October, at the home of Mrs. Harold G. Cutler, at 334 Beacon st.

We hear that the tall and lovely niece of Mrs. John Batchelder, Miss Harriet Smith (formerly of Chicago) now residing at the Miles Standish, is interested in a ninety-million dollar "fish" . . . she did quite a bit of fishing off of his yacht last summer . . . good luck!

There will be a meeting of the committee in charge of the "Four Literary Mornings" by Miss Emma Mills at the Hotel Statler on Monday afternoon at 3.30 . . . after the meeting tea will be served.

Books---And a Number of Things

BY CHARLES HANSON TOWNE

Nothing in New York has changed so much, and changed so swiftly, as the social life of the city, and it will alter even more. We went from cobblestones to asphalt slowly, but we leaped from white ties to dinner jackets almost over-night. Of course, the World War had something to do with this; but the war was not wholly responsible. The city had become so snobbish in certain quarters that something had to be done about it.

My friend, Arthur Krock, has written a witty "Short History of New York City." It is as follows:

"Originally, New York City belonged to the aborigines. The last of these, the Indians, after selling Manhattan Island to the Dutch, retired into their native forests. The English then conquered the Dutch, who retired into their clubs—the Knickerbocker and the Union. The Irish then conquered the English, who retired into their clubs—the Racquet and the Brook. The Jews then conquered the Irish, all of whom retired to Southampton."

Social Arbiter

When I was a lad we used to hear talk of the Four Hundred. What it was, and how it came into being, I did not know, and I cared less. The name of Ward McAllister was in the newspapers practically every day. He was the social arbiter of this restricted class, and the names of certain grand ladies were also mentioned—names like Mrs. Astor, Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Mrs. Vanderbilt, and so on, society leaders. But I always wondered, as a child who was led, and where. It seemed an odd thing to me that ladies went forth with banners, as I thought they must, with troops of ladies and gentlemen behind them. I knew that these mysterious people actually existed, mostly behind those fine portals of the Fifth ave. mansions. And I knew that they must go out occasionally, for I would hear of their being at the Opera, where Melba sang, and the great Calve, and the de Reszkes, and Plancon, and little Baumeister, who was likely, all the most dependable singer of them all, for she could be called upon, at a moment's notice, to fill any hole made vacant by the illness of a temperamental star.

We would read, in the social columns, that in her opera box Mrs. So-and-So wore a diamond tiara; and there would be a long and detailed description of her gown; and I used to ask myself why this was of so great importance. Yet Town Topics flourished in those unromantic days, and the peccadilloes of the so-called smart set were read avidly and openly by the servants below stairs, and secretly by those above stairs—or in their dentist's office.

Monkey Dinner

Harry Lehr, a young man of wit from Baltimore, appeared upon the social scene; and one heard of monkey dinners given at Newport for the delection of this inner circle. How sad, I thought, their parties must have been, when they were forced to resort to such entertainment to amuse themselves! "The Poor Little Rich Girl" had not been written then, but subconsciously, I believe that everyone pitied, more than censured, this aristocratic set, who seemed to be so bored with life.

When he heard of red-rug-and-awning parties which lasted until dawn, when breakfast was served at small tables, and the champagne still flowed like Niagara; when there were spicy paragraphs in Town Topics (there were no tabloids then to give the tragic news at once) stating that Mrs. So-and-So had been carried out dead drunk by four beautifully accoutered flunkies, we parvenus held our breath. An astonishing world, this existing beneath our city or was it above it?

A curious book appeared, called "The Social Register." A strange title to be given a volume, in a country that was supposed to be thoroughly democratic. It was slim at first. It comprised, I imagine, only 400 magic names. Now, no less than 40,000 are listed within its bulky pages.

And other cities throughout our country followed New York's example and brought forth their own local editions of the Register—some of which are so thin that it is comically pathetic. But as Lord Tolloler sings in "Iolanthe":

Spurn not the nobly born
With love affected,
Nor treat with virtuous scorn
The well-connected
High rank involves no shame—
We boast an equal claim
With him of humbly name
To be respected.
Blue blood! blue blood!
Hearts just as pure and fair
May beat in Belgrave Square
As in the lowly air
Of Seven Dials!

Those Climbers

No wonder that Finley Peter Dunne, years ago, spoke of one of our social climbers, sitting in her cold hotel bedroom on a winter day, warming her hands at the Social Register.

One respects that wit who, when asked if he was in the Social Register said, "No; look for me in Who's Who."

Well, it has all changed. The proud are not as haughty as they once ventured to be, foolishly enough. There is no aristocracy unless it be an aristocracy of brains (the opening within have at last found that out, and it is a salutary thing that the truth has finally been brought home to them.

Latest Notes of the Fashionables

By Dorothy Whipple Fry

THERE ARE STILL SOME glamorous nights left to be spent on parapets where late blossoming clematis still clings in ghostly array. Cool crisp fall winds spring up. Milady must find a wrap for such a night as this. There is a lovely little type of cape coat that the youngsters are wearing they fall in graceful folds from the shoulders and supply the necessary warmth as well as the desired note of beauty.

There is one lovely young thing in whom both the sunlight of moonlight finds a charming silhouette She is Miss Sally White of the North Shore, a blonde, who not only looks ravishing in her picture hat and trailing organdie frock for summer wear, but also looks smart in her autumn attire. She is a member of the Vincent Club and attended the occasion of its convening at The Country Club last week, looking very snappy with her golden hair curled low on her neck, her jaunty little hat that droops alluringly over one eye and then reveals her good-looking profile and coiffure. She wore a claret red frock with a soft brown fur at her neck and you know what an enchanting smile she has.

Sally White

Miss Katherine Talbot has close cropped curls and a very enchanting manner. She looks exceedingly well in her tan dress with the colorful plaid coats.

Miss Barbara Holsworth looked exceedingly well in her black velvet afternoon dress, with her dark hair brushed straight back from her face, and done low over her ears. Miss Holsworth is a brunette with dark eyes, and a nice smile. She has just announced her engagement to Mr. Otis Wingo of Washington. He is a senior at Princeton, and as yet no date has been set for the wedding.

Full of Charm

THEN, OF COURSE, there is the attractive Miss Anne Means. Not only is she full of charm, but she also has great ability as an organizer. She is at present engaged in running a little lamp and candlestick shop. She looks well in her unique afternoon frock of green twill with quaint little shirring at the waist and about the collar which hangs in the modish cape line. Her hat lets her brown hair curl up over the edges of the brim in back. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Means of Brookline.

The houses of the different members of the Junior League are alight with the glow of hospitality. The league conference is in session, and at Zero Marlborough there is a hum of activity and a buzz of activity. Mrs. Luthrop Withington of Clyde st., Brookline is housing the member from the greatest distance, Mrs. Herbert Dowsett from Honolulu. Mr. Withington's home was formerly in Honolulu. Miss E. J. Wannamaker, and Mrs. Wardlow Thompson, of Charlotte N. C., are also guests at the Withington house.

Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, 2d, is entertaining Mrs. Henry B. Clark and Mrs. Frederick Williamson from Elizabeth, N. J.; Mrs. A. J. Wray from Houston, Texas; Mrs. Pierce Miller and Mrs. Ireneman Cook from Indianapolis.

Fetes for Debs

Galeties, parties, lunches, teas, dances, the air is simply full of them and all for those charming young things, the debutantes.

Miss Ellen Bird Ross is tall and exquisite in face with golden hair, blue eyes, and very beautifully chiseled features. She has a delicacy of line and contour that is most appealing. She looks lovely in her flowing evening gown. Miss Ross is the granddaughter of Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird, who is entertaining for her and Miss Mary Reynolds Bird, a sister-deb. Miss Bird is dark, with an oval face, and a very charming person. She has brown eyes, a dainty and slender figure coupled with a lovely poise of manner, and a delightful voice.

Marblehead Folk Open Season

The Marblehead Club has recently opened its 1932-33 season when Joe Mitchell Chapple, editor of the National Magazine, presented his "Flashlights of Famous People."

On the occasion of the opening event, Mrs. Charles F. Wright, a past president, acted as hostess, while Mrs. Warren A. Thorndike, who has been elected president this year, announced a most interesting and active program of events for this season. Miss Gladys E. Nelson is chairman of the program committee.

Mrs. Thorndike is already well known to large circle of Massachusetts women as past grand matron of the Eastern Star. She is also director of the First Congregational Church of Swampscott. Her club affiliations are the Professional Women's Club, Women's Organist Club, director of the Marblehead Staff and Golf Club and is also a member of the recently formed Mothercraft Club.

Women Poor Sports Because Men Like Them to Be--- Says Noted Writer

"WHAT'S THE USE," we heard a brilliant woman exclaim disgustedly, "of standing squarely on your own feet, shouldering your share of responsibility, smiling like a good sport when you're licked, instead of whining or weeping? Sensible Love Is Best, Says Miss Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I'm to be married to the most wonderful man, whom I love devotedly. But mine is a sensible love. I'd die for him if it were necessary; but I don't think of him every minute of the time. I'm a business woman, and I have other things to think about during business hours. Friends tell me if you're really in love you can't eat or sleep. Please let me say that nothing is wrong with my appetite or ability to sleep.

BRIDE-TO-BE

Dear Bride-to-Be: I wonder if it's not the other way about, if it isn't sleep and meal losers who are the victims of infatuation and if those who experience real love aren't blessed with a dash more of good hard common sense? So often highly emotional people who "can't eat or sleep" for one man or woman are [illegible] mealless and sleepless for another and then another in a surprisingly short space of time. Real love has more durable qualities.

Gave Him Her Money

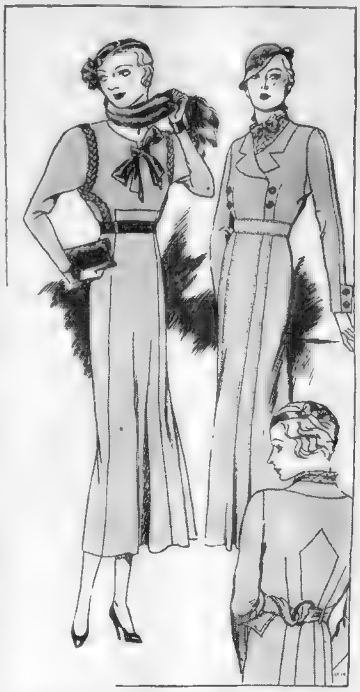

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I was a widow up to a year and a half ago. Against the advice of my mother and two daughters, ages 15 and 17, I married a man who though not well educated seemed very kind-hearted to me. My first husband had left me a life insurance policy of $[illegible]. This my second husband got me to make over to him, for some "business interests" which I've never been able to understand, nor have any evidence of their existence. He stays away from home a good deal claiming my mother and daughters do not like him. While this is true they never have been as rude to him as he is to them. What would you advise me to do about this unfortunate marriage?

LUCY B.

Dear Lucy B.: Please let me impress upon you with all the vehemence at my command not to waste another 24 hours, but to see a lawyer without delay and get an immediate accounting of your life insurance money. And I only hope it is not too late to get at least part of it back. Don't tell your husband you're going to take this step, as he may leave before he can make explanations.

How to Prepare Cheaper Cuts of Meats

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB.

I HATE to even mention Old Man Depression—he seems to thrive on publicity and I have a feeling that if we just ignore him he may go away—but we certainly have one thing to thank him for and that is that he has made it fashionable to be economical.

Meats offer two methods of economy. Either you may buy a large roast of the best cut, and by serving it in different ways make it last for several days, or you may buy less expensive cuts and by careful cooking, make them just as tender and tasty as the most expensive cuts. The round steak, while not quite as juicy as the porter-house steak, is just as nourishing, and the unappreciated flank steak can be stuffed and served for company.

Stuffed Flank Steak

1 flank steak (about 2 lbs.)
1 cup dried breadcrumbs
½ chopped onion
4 tbsps. melted fat
½ cup chopped celery
¾ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper
½ tsp. sage

Mix all the ingredients except the steak. Spread stuffing on steak and roll it up. Fasten with skewers or tie it. Roll the stuffed steak in seasoned flour, and brown all sides in hot fat. Place in a baking dish, add ½ cup hot water, cover and cook in hot oven, for about an hour and a half. Remove skewers or string. Thicken the gravy left in the pan. Will serve six.

American Chop Suey

¾ lbs. diced veal or beef
¾ lbs. diced pork (lean)
2 large onions
4 cups boiling water
1 tbsp. chop suey sauce
3 tbsps of fat
2 cups sliced celery
Salt and pepper to taste.

Roll meat in flour, fry in fat until brown. Add onion and water, chop suey sauce and seasoning. Cover and let simmer for one hour. Add celery and cook for another half hour. Serve with boiled rice.

In preparing pork, be sure to cook it thoroughly. Lamb and beef can be served rare, but never pork. For this reason, broiling and pan broiling are not successful methods of cooking pork chops. They are apt to get a hard crust on the outside and be underdone on the inside.

Breaded Pork Chops

Mix ¾ cup of breadcrumbs with ¾ teaspoon salt and a dash of pepper. Beat up 1 egg with 1 tablespoon of water. Dip the chops first into the egg mixture, and then into the breadcrumbs. Let the coating dry for about ½ hour. Brown the chops lightly in 2 tablespoons of fat in a heavy skillet. Add only a little boiling water at a time—more, now and then, if necessary. Cover the skillet closely, and let cook either in the oven, or on top of the stove, at a moderate heat, for 20 minutes, or until the meat is tender. Garnish with baked apples and watercress.

Daily True Story
Baby Carriage

HOW BRIGHT AND NEW it looked, the carriage for little Rosalie, when Mrs. Relecco first brought it home from the store. What excitement had attended the buying of this carriage for her first-born! She had passed and repassed in front of stores a hundred times, looking at this carriage and that carriage, unable to make up her mind.

She had counted the dollar bills saved for the purpose again and again, to make sure that all were there.

And now she had the carriage—the baby carriage that she would use for Rosalie. It was made of bamboo wood, and painted yellow. It was large and luxuriant, and the yellow wood glistened in the sun. Its handles were good to touch. Mrs. Relecco was happy.

Day after day she sat in the little square near her East Side home, rocking the carriage with its precious occupant. And time passed, till Rosalie was too old for the carriage.

"I will put it away," said Mrs. Relecco shyly to her husband. "It may come in useful again."

The carriage, no longer new and bright and resplendent in the sun, served for Anthony. And again it was put away in a corner of the Relecco flat, in the hope that again it might prove useful.

Alas. An epidemic of a children's disease entered the city and Rosalie and Anthony were among the first to go before the grim reaper. And Mrs. Relecco and her husband thought that their hearts would break, and never dared to look at the baby carriage that held so many memories. A year passed, and another son came. The baby carriage was again taken from its corner and pressed into service. Its bright yellow color had faded. And so the Releccos, not wishing to make the necessary expenditure for a new baby carriage—in fact, not being able to do so—had the old carriage painted black and generally repaired. It was only a poor thing, though, compared to what it had been when new.

When the boys grew up, Mrs. Relecco again put the carriage in a corner, and said with a sigh:

"It may come in useful again. Let us not throw it away."

Years passed, and in time Mrs. Relecco was a widow. Heavy was her grief, especially as her son was demented. He was a babbling half-wit. Now she was destitute and forlorn. Bravely she carried a basket about the street, pedling pretzels and candies. The few pennies she earned kept her and her poor half-witted son from starving.

Mrs. Relecco grew gray and worn and stoop-shouldered. The years of sorrow and work showed in the lines of her face.

Soon the basket seemed almost too heavy for her. And one day she looked at the old baby carriage, and sadly she put her wooden basket in it to see if it would fit.

As she observed that the carriage could accommodate the basket filled with her pitiful wares, Mrs. Relecco burst into tears.

"I—I always thought it would come in useful."

Sometimes passersby laugh when they see an old woman sitting on a bench in the square, crooning lullabies as she rocks a carriage containing pretzels and candy . . .

Itch May Easily Be Confused With Eczema

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

HOW in the world did I ever get the itch?" is a question frequently asked by sufferers from scabies, which is an infectious disease caused by an animal parasite that has a [illegible] [illegible] Since [illegible] itch is [illegible] with [illegible] tion [illegible] transmitted from one individual to another by the use of public washrooms, bath houses and rest rooms and in this way it may reach a person who is clean and careful about his personal hygiene.

The parasite burrows into the skin and causes an inflammation. If the skin is closely examined, the path of the parasite can be distinctly seen, slightly elevated above the level of the skin and with a grayish speck at one end. [illegible] is usually found between the fingers, on the [illegible] under the arms and in the [illegible]. In children it is [illegible] commonly seen on the palms of the hands and soles of the feet.

Itching is very marked in scabies. The skin is reddened and due to the severe itching, is torn by scratching. It may be confused with eczema and other skin conditions.

Etiquette Ruling The Hope Chest

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

Will you kindly tell me if it is customary for a young girl's fiance to present her with a hope chest? I am planning to be married next spring and mother is planning to give me a hope chest.

J.

There isn't any rule about giving of the hope chest. The girl may buy it herself, or her mother may give it to her, or her fiance may give it to her. It is for the girl herself to decide which she prefers.

An Invitation

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

I have been going with a boy for about eight months and I have been to his cottage to visit his parents. I would like to know if it would be proper to ask him to supper one evening?

PUZZLED.

By all means have your mother invite this friend to come to your home to have supper with your family and you. He and his family have shown you such special hospitality that it would seem very uncordial of you if you, too, don't make a gesture of hospitality. And inviting friends to dine with us in our home is the height of honor and hospitality that we can show them.

The Marry-Go-Round
Womankind—And Unkind

By HELEN ROWLAND

IT IS NEARLY always some giddy, shallow-brained woman who starts a foolish fad or invents a freak fashion, which all the intelligent, "sensible" women rush breathlessly to follow.

Helen Rowland

It seems almost a shame for a girl to take a man, who can win a golf tournament, stake a tent, drive a plane and ride a polo pony—and pin him down to running the lawn mower and walking the baby.

The reason why a woman keeps on asking a man to tell her that he loves her is probably because she has a subconscious conviction that if she can make him say it over often enough, he will come to believe it himself.

A man never realizes how much he values a hat, an umbrella or a woman's love until he sees some other big boy calmly walking off with it.

When a woman shows the first slight flicker of jealousy she is boring the man, flattering the other woman—and insulting herself.

A man will stop right in the middle of a shave to telephone his sweetheart before marriage. After marriage he won't even part his lips under the lather to answer her.

Men are more cheerful and philosophic than women—because, no matter how much of his life lies behind a man he always feels confident that there is a new adventure and another woman waiting somewhere ahead of him.

New Red Shades in Winter Color Schemes

By PARIS BUREAU

PARIS, Oct. 21—When fashion news from Paris lists red at the top of fashionable new colors, it means not only the old familiar reds we are accustomed to, but dozens of other new hues as well. There is a whole new family of colors with red as a basis—reds mixed with browns, with blues with yellows.

Brick is the color used by Lyolene for the coat-dress in today's sketch. The material is the old familiar serge, woven in a finer and softer texture than the old-fashioned serge.

The entire dress is cut like a fitted coat—double-breasted fastening, two-seam sleeves, mannish collar and all. There is a single softening touch in the little white guimpe tucked inside the collar, made entirely of Irish crochet. The belt fastens at the back through a loop of brick-colored galalith, and there are brick-colored buttons.

Another type of red—one which is so blue that it is almost purple—replaces the Mirande dress [illegible] all the trimmings are in the same reddish-violet tones—the velvet bow at the neck, the velvet belt and the silk braids outlining the wide arm-eyes.

..another expert chooses Crisco for all frying and shortening purposes

During the recent cooking school Mrs. Northcross showed thousands of women how to make fried and baked foods more delicious by using Crisco. Naturally, she used Crisco because she knew that she could depend on this all-purpose cooking fat to help her demonstrate her points. And she is only one of hundreds of experts who prefer Crisco. Ever since Mrs. Northcross held her school here, more and more women have been telling their grocers how much they like Crisco, and how glad they are that they tried it. Because of this growing interest the local grocers have decided to feature Crisco at special prices this week so that every woman may have an opportunity to learn of its many superior qualities.

none and advised me to try Borneo.

I resorted to a very old and simple method. On the way to Java, my first stop en route to Macassar, the principal port of Celebes, I made inquiries of everyone who looked sociable in an effort to find a person who could give me some reliable information. These inquiries yielded nothing.

However, on the way from Surabaya, Java, to Macassar, I learned from a Eurasian ship steward that there was a Dutch resident on the west coast of Celebes who, while traveling on the same boat, had mentioned a strange little animal—a sort of dwarf buffalo—that was to be found in his district. Everyone thought that this was an animal the Dutch resident had seen in his cups and there had been much joking about it. The more irreverent passengers, according to the stewart, pressed the Dutchman for information as to whether one could not also find in Celebes a pigmy rhinoceros—and a diminutive elephant that could be worn as a watch-charm.

The resident finally silenced his hecklers by producing a picture of his midget buffalo, which, as described by the steward, convinced me that I would be taking no great chance in trying the West Coast first. I have run down fine specimens of all kinds on the strength of slimmer tips than this.

I put in at Macassar and from there made my way up the West Coast on a small inter-island trading schooner. It developed on my arrival that the steward's information had been correct. The anoa was fairly well known on the West Coast and was believed to be moderately plentiful in certain districts about 50 miles inland. With half a dozen experienced native animal boys to help me, I set out for the interior

After following several false leads and wasting three days in fruitless wanderings, we located the grazing ground of a herd of anoas. As there was no precedent for the method of trapping them, I decided as an experiment, to build a big corral and try to lure some of the wary animals in o it.

The corral, built of three-inch stakes of bamboo the strongest fencing material in that part of the world, covered an area of nearly half an acre and required several days of hard work by myself and all my helpers. When it was done, I prepared the bait which I hoped would lure my prizes into the trap. Carefully I strewed along the ground leading to the corral's open swinging door a mixture of sweet potatoes, padi rice, tapioca root and green grass, a combination guaranteed to tempt any bovine

For the first few days there was no result. Each day I patiently renewed the feed and spread a faint trace of it far out into the edge of the meadows. On the fifth day one of the natives reported some anoa footprints nearby. But it took us two weeks to make our first catch - a fine, husky young male. Ten days later we landed a female. Our efforts during the next fortnight or so to pick up a few more specimens were unavailable. A drought had set in and the herd started migrating to better feeding grounds.

Our female pygmy gave us no trouble at all. She behaved like a lady. The male, however—who later became known as Little Tough Guy—resented his captivity and at regular intervals tried to do something about it. Head yowered, he would come charging at the bamboo fence, seemingly hopeful of butting it to pieces. At that, he succeeded in shaking loose some of the strong three-inch uprights, which, driven into the ground and lashed together with rattan peelings, formed the walls of his prison. This was quite a feat for so small an animal.

Rare Birds Repay Trip to Macassar

The next step was to drive each of our captives into a native-made log cage, the approach to which was strewn with the same kind of feed we had used before. Hunger weakens judgment and our pygmies fell for the device again, the lady being quite docile, even seemingly perfectly content—about it.

Little Tough Guy, however, didn't like his new home at all and lost no time in making clear what he thought of cage life. Again he tried to butt his way to freedom, snorting furiously as he charged the logs that held him captive. I assigned two boys to watch him in shifts and more than once they had to reinforce the rattan lashings, these tough fibers giving way before the repeated onslaughts of the unwilling prisoner.

Little Tough Guy finally began to calm down. He remained restless and sullen throughout the journey back to Singapore but he had the good grace to leave off trying to batter his cage apart.

It hardly paid me to make the trip just for the anoas. Before leaving Macassar, which is the great shipping center for scores of small islands of the Malay Archipelago, I decided to pick up a number of birds for which I had orders. To Macassar birds of all kinds—including the rarest and most valuable—are brought in by traders and this was a perfect opportunity to do a little shopping.

By the time I was ready to leave Macassar for Singapore, I had assembled a remarkable collection that included fine examples of the yellow-backed lory, the Papuan lory, the racquet-tailed parrakeet (with its curious tail that resembles a tennis racquet), the eclectus parrot (the only species of bird known to science whose females are more highly colored than the males) and the Victoria crown pigeon, the largest and most beautiful member of the pigeon family.

In those days—several years before I established my sheds and shelters in the nearby suburb of Katong—I maintained a compound in the Orchard Road section of Singapore. Here I deposited Little Tough Guy, along with the other specimens I had brought out of Celebes.

VALENTINE

By Hazle Livingston

A Heart-Gripping Novel Depicting Love and Disillusionment

But it was too late to think about that. She was on her way to Lester the train was carrying her to him, at last . . .

She fell asleep toward morning and dreamed that she was lying in Lester's arms, and he was recoiling from her in horror because she was calling him "Joe."

She could hear herself screaming "Joe, Joe."

Awoke, face damp and hair clinging to her wet forehead, thankful for the noise, the whistling of a passing freight train, that had kept her from being heard all over the car.

Millie met her at the station in Los Angeles.

They clung to each other. Millie said, "I have lost my husband," and wept. Val cried a little, too, partly because she felt that she had lost hers, too.

But Millie smiled through the mist of tears, said "But I must not be sad. I must not make you sad. We're going to be gay! Oh, so gay and young and happy together. Just the way Deems would want it to be."

Looking at Millie as they rolled toward Millie's apartment in the taxi, Val was surprised to see how gay and happy and well Millie did look.

MILLIE'S CURVES

But not so young. The slimness, the pale, almost childishly simple wool dresses that had characterized her that last time they were together, had vanished as completely as poor Mr. Harris.

With a little start of surprise, Val realized that for the first time since she was grown up, she was seeing Millie as she used to look, years ago. A Millie with frankly voluptuous curves, a generous dash of makeup, a big hat, and a fur!

"Millie, you look just the way you used to look, when I was a little girl!"

Millie laughed with pleasure

"Darling! Oh, but I don't. I was so young then—younger than you are now—well, practically speaking, I did marry young, you know. But, of course, that's a long time ago and I—I've got a big girl for a daughter now."

"Oh, you still look young," Val assured her loyally. She did! And when she wasn't so plump she'd look younger still. "But what I meant was your clothes. Of course they're modern, but they — well they are the same KIND of clothes you had then!"

UP TO OLD TRICKS

"Hmmm—picturesque, isn't that what you mean? After all, I AM that type. So I may as well dress the part. And my darling, you do not know what a relief it is to be able to be myself again! Well, you will never know. You've been too sheltered, and you married that sweet boy who would think you looked like The Well Dressed Woman no matter what you wore. But I——"

"Of course Joe always liked my clothes. But didn't—didn't your—I mean, Mr. Shallor and Mr. Harris——"

"Mr Shallor!" Millie almost spat through her teeth! "That convention-bound old libertine! Don't you remember? How can you forget those polo coats—horse blankets I call them—that he used to make me wear? Ugh! I can remember those slouch hats and brogues yet! And dear old Deemie was just as bad in his own way. A seven-yard length of brocade, perfectly moth-eaten, with a hole for the neck and arms was his idea of something stunning for evening. Oh, my soul, how plain I was! And me, yearning for velvets and rhinestones and lace!"

She laughed and Val laughed; a little less gayly, with her.

There was Millie back at her old tricks. Disillusioning you about the past that she had once made so glamorous

"Well, Jim liked your clothes. I have heard him say so. I remember it," she said stoutly.

Millie looked out the window.

"Yes, he thought I was perfect. And I . . I thought . . Val, are you trying to make me get sentimental over the past? Jim Atkinson was a sailor, with a taste for seashells and pretty girls. And he had a big fat mama and a half dozen kids waiting for him at home. He said himself that it was a good job I sent him back, finally"

They both felt depressed for a few moments. Through the city the taxi took its way.

They turned up a side street, off the boulevard. The driver leaned out looking for numbers.

Millie said "It's in that apartment house over across the street. The sort of Spanish one. I hope you won't mind a one room and kitchenette, and sleeping with me in a wall bed. I rather like it. It's sort of fun, camping. And of course it's only temporary!"

It was like the rooms Millie used to have, years ago.

Shabby furniture, shabbier even than the furniture that was in the apartment in Minneapolis. But there was a something about it an air of comfort, charm. Millie's gold-backed brushes on the dresser Millie's magazines in careless yet orderly array on a low table that held a bowl of daffodils and white iris, an open box of chocolates, and a crimson leather cigarette case Millie's perfume in the air. Millie's photographs on the walls

Photographs of everything that had been life to Millie—and everything, old and new, framed with wide white mats and narrow black frames.

"MARY FAITH"

How a Fascinating Heroine Met Old Problems in a New Way

By Beatrice Burton

He laid down the paper and offered Mary Faith his chair. "Sit here, sit here! It's the coolest place in the whole house. . . . And how's this young feller?" He took out his old-fashioned gold watch and dangled it before the baby's eyes. "Too bad you have to go away every day and leave that youngster, Mary Faith. Can't you make his father provide for you? Seems to me he ought to be willing to do something."

Mary Faith thought that over.

Perhaps she, herself, ought to write to Kim and tell him that she would get a divorce and ask him to provide for herself and the baby. Perhaps she ought to give up her position at Nesbit's and take care of the baby herself for the next few years—while he was so little.

"It's hard sometimes to know what to do, Mr. McClintock," she said slowly. "Did you ever hear this—Do nothing and all will be done?—Sometimes I think that's the best sort of advice for a woman in my position—in my position——"

Last Three Words

She repeated the last three words of the sentence automatically and then her voice died away into silence. She had caught sight of a familiar name on the folded page of Mr. McClintock's paper. Claire Maldon's name. It was contained in a legal notice tucked away among other legal notices like it in the divorce news of the day. But tiny as it was, it stood out like screaming black headlines to Mary Faith.

So Claire actually was divorcing Jack at last That probably meant that she intended to be married again. Claire wasn't the sort of person who would give up one good meal-ticket husband unless she had another one within sight. She wasn't the sort of woman who would throw herself away for love and love alone. There were too many other things that meant a great deal to her, as Mary Faith knew very well . . . luxurious surroundings, smart clothes, a fast car, fast friends and plenty of ready money for the entertaining of them

"If she married Kim she'd want him to give her all the things that Jack gave her," Mary Faith went on thinking, her face sombre with her inward concern and dismay. "And after a while, when they were a little tired of each other, she'd probably treat him the way she treated Jack. As if he were a sort of guardian and upper servant."

Middle of Night

In the middle of the night, when everything always seems distorted and dreadful somehow, she woke up and lay staring at the gray oblongs of the windows and thinking about Kim until dawn. . . . Suppose he tried to sue her for divorce. Suppose his mother persuaded him that Mary Faith had gone back to Nesbit's because she was in love with Mark Nesbit. Suppose he packed up and left town and she never saw him again. Suppose he went away with Claire——

But with the pearly morning light she became sane and calm once more, and felt sure that none of these things would happen

One night Mark Nesbit's car was just starting away from the curb as she stepped out of the front door of the building. It stopped, and his voice came to her through the wet and windy darkness.

"Take you home, Miss Fenton?" He never called her anything but Miss Fenton.

"No thanks, Mr. Nesbit," she called back to him, and his car went on down the street. By the time she caught a street car she was soaked to the skin and she sat, shivering and wondering if she had not been a fool to refuse his offer of a ride home. She hoped that Mr. Nesbit would not think that she had acted in a coy and kittenish way about it, and she half-wished that she had hopped into the car and ridden home with him. That would have been the natural and sensible thing to do . . . It was hard to figure out what was the natural and sensible thing to do when you were married to one man and working in another man's office.

Cold November

November came in colder than October and just as rainy. The baby could not go out for his daily airing and Elsie reported every night that he had been restless and cross all day long.

"If he were at home he could take his naps on the little screened porch," thought Mary Faith "and he could have the run of five or six rooms instead of being cooped up in one room almost all day"

She was standing at the window looking down into the transformed courtyard below, when the door of Mark Nesbit's office opened and he came and stood beside her.

"Almost three years since you and I were out in a snowstorm like this, isn't it?" he asked "Remember?"

She did remember. It had been the night he asked her to marry him. She remembered it because it had been the night Kim came back to her after his first long desertion of her. They had sat in his little car outside Mrs. Puckett's house and planned their future—and she had been so happy that it had seemed as though all the stars fell down and shattered in River st. that night.

"It was a long time ago, wasn't it, Mary Faith?" One of his hands slid along the window sill and covered one of hers.

"Three years, you said." She drew her hand from under his and began to back away from the window. She wished, just as she had wished it three years before, that Mark Nesbit would stay in his lofty place as president of the Nesbit [illegible] Company and forget that she was anything but his secretary. She thought that he had forgotten it. For seven months he had been so businesslike, so matter-of-fact with her at all times that sometimes she wondered if he had ever been really in love with her.

"Do you remember what I told you that night three years ago?" he was asking her now in a quiet heavy voice. She had sunk down on her chair behind her desk, and he was leaning over her.

Shook Her Head

"No, I don't remember, Mr. Nesbit. It's so long ago, isn't it?" She threw out her hands, that were usually so capable and sure, in a helpless uncertain little movement.

"Well, I told you I'd probably feel about you all the rest of my life as I felt then," he said, "and I do. I knew it all the time you were away from this place—and, as soon as I heard from Miss Bartlett that you'd left your husband, I made up my mind to let you know just how things were with me." He spoke in that same stilted heavy way as if he had thought out what he wanted to say and was trying to remember just how he had planned to say it.

"If you hadn't come down here to work, I had made up my mind to find you and tell you all this. Not just at first, of course. I thought I'd wait for a few months—and those few months have passed. When you are free, I'm going to ask you again if you'll marry me."

He stopped and seemed to be waiting for her to make some kind of an answer. But Mary Faith only stared at him, her eyes wide and dark in her face that had gone dead white.

"And I think I ought to add," he went on, "that I'd be glad to adopt your boy and help you bring him up." He had thought of everything, evidently.

Stood Up

"If I'd dreamed that you were still thinking about me like this, Mr. Nesbit, I'd never have come back here. But it all seemed so businesslike and ordinary at the time, Jean Bartlett was leaving and you needed someone to take her place—and I needed the place and the salary so badly—Did you think I was getting a divorce?"

She stopped abruptly as the telephone on her desk rang.

"Just a second, Mr. Nesbit," she said and lifted the receiver to her ear. "Mr. Nesbit's secretary speaking."

"Mary Faith? This you? It was Kim's mother's voice, and at the sound of it Mary Faith started violently. She had not heard from her in several months.

"Doctor and I wondered whether you could stop in here when you leave your office tonight," she was saying. "We wanted to talk to you about Kimberley. He's been very ill, you know."

"No, I didn't know it." Mary Faith sat down in her chair. "What's been wrong with him?"

"Pneumonia."

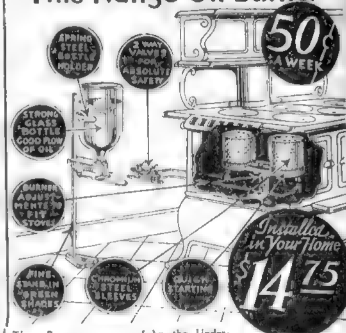

Pneumonia! And they had never let her know!

"He's much better now of course," the smooth soft voice at the other end of the wire ran on, and Mary Faith seemed to be listening to it with every fiber of her body. "Much better. And doctor and I don't like to bother you at this time. But certain things have come up in the last day or two, and we feel that we can't settle them without your help."

Oh, what did the woman mean? Why didn't she say plainly and clearly what was wrong instead of talking about certain things that had come up . . . Mary Faith couldn't imagine what those certain things could be.

A HOME PAPER FOR PEOPLE WHO THINK

Recalling Early Kate Smith Promoter

By N. F. T.

Early struggles for recognition, an outline of the life and career of Kate Smith is the theme of a story featured in recent radio magazine issues. Her business manager wrote the piece, mildly interesting although far from a masterpiece.

FORGOTTEN FACTS

It omitted one episode embracing considerable worthwhile human interest possibility. Meaning the time when a well known New York radio writer fought hard and long to land her on his program backed by prominent Gotham furniture dealers. Insistence, persuasion and promises of publicity finally won the sponsor over. A case where the money men didn't care for warbling by Kate Smith at all. Sounds incidental but it came about when the big girl very much wanted something of the sort to come about. Indeed our editor friend helped a heap, as would Hercules where great weight need lifting.

Nick Kenny is the fellow, also a talent scout who has found more than a few present day successful broadcasting artists. He isn't squawking by any means, nor is your Uncle N. F. T. Growls are rough on any disposition, especially those ever eager to have Fate keep smiling. Kate Smith has become a bright star an unquestionably deserves to shine. Granted but why leave out of such a story what may well be termed a substantial beginning, perhaps the turning point from which she came right along to the top? Not so good.

LONG LOYALTY

Citing an opposite situation, consider the deep-rooted respect of Amos 'n' Andy for Announcer Bill Hay. In the beginning, when the now famous blackface boys worked for precisely no dollars, Bill was their ardent admirer. Verily a booster than which no more enthusiastic could be found in all Chicago. Any history leading up to where Amos 'n' Andy "arrived" as they say, would be incomplete without adequate mention of Bill Hay. They haven't forgotten for a minute, those three.

LOCAL LATHER

Two attractive young ladies looking a lot like twins in natty brown double breasted short coats announced themselves as the James Sisters upon applying to Yankee Network studios for an impromptu audition yesterday. They hail from WHEB Portsmouth New Hampshire, and what harmony! Craig (WEEI) Avad, youthful Irish tenor, is the principal in person attraction at an Allston affair of the "Brightlesome Club" tonight . . . There's four fellows on T wharf who put out some hot quartet vocalizing which Hub broadcasting busses might check up on one of these days. Ted Cotreau, Larry Cotreau, Joe Curr'e and Harry Ross are their names. They sing a peppy piece appropriately enough called "Tow Boat Blues" . . . How many subscribers heard Ruthie Chilton lend her contralto pipes to that "Sweetheart Hour" selection last night (WNAC) at 8 15? Beginning November 1, our Boston station WAAB plans to get going each morning at 8:30, instead of 7:45 as at present . . . In addition to various results visited by heavy downpours this week, be it known how fan mail took a very marked jump in volume at all round sanctums hereabouts.

REAL ESTATE, RANKING FIRST, GETS AID LAST

By B. C. FORBES

HALF the wealth of America consists of real estate, especially homeowners, are the very last to be helped, to have credit facilities organized for their benefit. Only now are Home Loan Banks being set up.

Commercial banks have received special consideration, savings banks have received special consideration, the railroads have received special consideration, insurance companies have received special consideration, agriculture has received special consideration, but the class who constitute the backbone of the nation, homeowners, heretofore have been left to skip for themselves. No millions or billions of public money have been fed out to relieve their distress.

WILL BE SENT ELSEWHERE

Such notables as Calvin Coolidge and Alfred E. Smith have consented to apply themselves to studying ways and means of protecting the interests of the railroads and their security owners. Yet railway bonds are not one-two-three in comparison with the magnitude and comparison of real estate obligations.

Home owners must not imagine that they can walk into one of the new Home Loan Banks and be relieved immediately of their harrassing troubles. The notion apparently has become widespread that these banks stand ready to hand over funds in exchange for mortgage deeds. The truth is that the applicant will be told to go elsewhere to go everywhere else, and try to place his mortgage, or, as the case may be, have it renewed.

Not until the needy home owner can prove to the satisfaction of those in charge of the Home Loan Bank that he has tried and tried and tried elsewhere and everywhere will he be in line for consideration.

FIRST CONSIDERATION

The new banks proclaim loudly that they are eager to avoid "competing" with existing organizations for financing homes and mortgages. Those unfortunates who have been obliged to scurry around to place mortgages can testify that the "competition" to do business with them has not been terrifically overwhelming.

The officials placed in charge of these new institutions should take a broad, not narrow view of their obligations towards home owners. Had adequate facilities been provided early in the depression to take reasonable care of home owners and owners of other real estate the heartbreaking conditions which developed could probably have been in considerable measure avoided. Home owners should have had first, not last, consideration.

This column is being deluged with letters from unemployed workers endorsing the complaints voiced concerning the treatment accorded by labor agencies. It has been made abundantly clear that federal and state and municipal authorities, as a whole, have lamentably failed to organize adequate plans for connecting unemployed individuals with jobs.

ACTION DESIRABLE

It was specifically stated when this subject of labor agencies was first broached here that the comments were inspired by scenes outside employment agencies on Sixth ave., New York. From various reputable employment agency owners come disclaimers of inconsiderate conduct. President John D. Brophy, of the New York Association of Commercial Employment Agencies, "while not attempting to defend labor employment agencies," writes in part

"There is a vast difference between the so-called labor and the commercial employment agencies (by the latter I mean those catering to administrative, financial, executive, legal, sales, technical, insurance, educational, medical, clerical and mental employments exclusively) . . . Deluged with applicants for positions, they have endeavored to keep cheerful, to say a friendly and helpful word always, to give advice and encouragement, spending hours and hours of their time to help keep up the morale of the unemployed without one cent of compensation. I could show you hundreds of unsolicited letters from gratified employers."

This, however, provides no solution whatever for the cruel hardships to which the rank and file of unskilled wage earners are subjected in their laudable efforts to support themselves and to avoid becoming a burden on charity. Effective action is profoundly desirable.

It looks as if there has already been considerable "discussing" of political uncertainty.

Live News of Leaders Today in Wall Street

OPINIONS in Wall St. today were sharply divided. The bearish element suggests sales on rallies and the bullish faction urges buying on declines. The market through most of today's trading continued absolutely to ignore banking declarations that the improvement in business is more than seasonal.

Atchison Is Out of "Doubtful Column"

Atchison common certainly represents one of the few roads which has thus far remained out of the "doubtful column." The issue has been favored with a good deal of long-pull buying on the theory that this road, having been conservatively managed during the era of wild stock-buying and expansion will be among the first to enjoy a come-back. At the curent level around 65, the preferred yields almost 8 per cent on the $5 annual dividend.

Rails Anticipate Loadings Increase

Conspicuous strength displayed by railway shares was based on an anticipated further increase in tomorrow's carloading report for the week of Oct. 5. Early returns induced some estimates of a 20,000 car gain for all roads, automatically establishing the highest traffic total of any week this year.

Rail Outlook Heartens Street

What is really heartening the street is the fact that the so-called peak loading week is now certain to come at a much later date than for several years past. In 1931 and in 1930 this was reached in the week of October 3 and in 1929 in the period ended September 29. Expectation also is that tomorrow's figures will donate the smallest decrease from a year ago to date.

Department Stores Maintaining Pickup

Continental Can and Du Pont Showings

Anaconda Financing Rumors Discredited

Rumor that Anaconda plans new financing to fund bank loans is discredited in banking circles.

Third Quarter Results Better

Concrete evidence that the third quarter pick-up in general trade boosted corporate income correspondingly is pretty generally admitted by statisticians who have analyzed most of the returns for the period already at hand. In many instances, where other income has contributed the greatest proportion of total profits in the last year and a half or so, the situation is being reversed.

I. T. T. Showing Little Vigor

Efforts to revive speculative activity in International Telephone & Telegraph have found public interest in the stock at low ebb. These attempts to recreate the former popularity of the issue have been based on purely speculative grounds. So far as is known, no decided change has occurred in the company's affairs or its outlook. Bank loans have been extended until 1933 by which time it is hoped conditions will be sufficiently favorable to permit long term funding of the floating indebtedness.

New Wheelbarrow Is on "Balloons"

Not to be outdone by more modern vehicles of transportation, the wheelbarrow will add to its non-intricate mechanism the only major change in years—a rubber tire. It will not be the old style high pressure tire, but patterned after airplane casings.

The "driver" of the balloon tired wheelbarrow will no longer be handicapped by mud and deep sand. It is claimed the improved "barrow" fairly glides over slush, it only deterrent being deep water. B. F. Goodrich Co. sponsors the innovation.

Motor Products Has 9 Months' Net Loss

New York, Oct. 21—Motor Products Corp. reports a net loss of $211,768 for the nine months ended September 30, after depreciation and taxes, as against a net profit of $205,479, equal to $1.05 a share on 195,699 shares of common in the like period of 1931. Net loss in the September quarter was $87,735, as against a net profit of $55,493, equal to 29 cents a share on 191,285 shares in the previous quarter and a net loss of $51,642 in the September quarter of 1931.

EARNINGS FOR THIRD QUARTER NOT ALL BAD

By FRANK H. MELOON

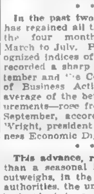

Earnings reports appearing for the third 1932 quarter are not all bad, and are in line with forecasts appearing here several weeks ago, for the most part. It can indeed be truthfully said that corporation earnings results for the third quarter of this year are on the whole somewhat better than generally expected, if statements already published are any index to those yet to come out. Many show improvement over the second quarter, and there are two or three isolated gains over last year.

Of the major companies that have already reported — General Electric and American Telephone—were in line with expectations, while the showing of Du Pont was better than anticipated. That of Westinghouse, which showed a bigger deficit, has been the lone exception. The loss was greater than looked for by Wall Street. Rails as a group appear to be doing best.

Russell H. Leonard, who has just been elected a vice-president of the Cotton Textile Institute, is one of the foremost figures in the New England cotton textile industry. Mr. Leonard is president and treasurer, as well as a director, of the big Pepperell Mfg Co. He has for some time been a director of the Cotton Textile Institute, which has been a leading factor in the restoration of the cotton textile industry to its proper high place in the industrial picture. Mr. Leonard also holds directorates in two banks the First National Bank of Boston and the Old Colony Trust Co.

In the past two months business has regained all the ground lost in the four months period from March to July. Practically all recognized indices of business activity recorded a sharp advance for September and the Consolidated Index of Business Activity—a weighted average of the better known measurements—rose from 52.0 to 55.1 in September, according to Gage P. Wright, president of the The Business Economic Digest.

This advance, representing more than a seasonal improvement, far outweighs, in the opinion of many authorities, the uncertainties usually incident to a national election, and justifies the belief that this betterment of business will be sustained. In support of this forecast, the economists point to the extreme ease now existing in the money market. The $450,000,000 issue of Treasury notes brought out a record over-subscription, and an issue of short-term bills sold on a yield basis of less than two-tenths of one per cent.

STATE ST. Hears:

That the cautionary note sounded here yesterday should not be disregarded. The list is far from its usual self and a partial withdrawal from long stocks is in order. The rails acted fairly well, but the industrials obviously stalled and it will take real sponsorship to get them started again. Until it is plainly in evidence, it must be admitted that the risks of a long position are large. Stops should be used to protect all stock held during the next few sessions.

Price Action

Throughout the bear market prices generally conformed to a rather set pattern. This called for a 50 per cent recovery of declines followed by a day or so of quiet markets, after which the decline was again resumed. Current price action is conforming to this bear market style.

As noted yesterday the recoveries more often than not carried back to the previous lows. Here again the similarity of movement is startling. Both the rails and the industrial "averages" have not only recovered 50 per cent of the decline, but they are at the early October lows.

Now the bull forces are not necessarily beaten just because price action has conformed to a definite bear pattern. But they are decidedly on the defensive and if the public is to follow along the constructive forces must put prices decisively through the resistance.

Heard in the Street

The tobaccos are still receiving a lot of attention, both in the board-rooms and from large trading interests. Despite denials of a price cut the group is obviously laboring under some extraordinary handicap. Perhaps it is true that a Boston professional is endeavoring to weaken the list through them.

Politics and economics continue to be mixed by the propagandists. The latest is the controversy over the tariff. High tariff champions belittle a tariff for income and attempt to prove their point by pointing out that cheap goods are flooding our markets.

There is no doubt about the cheap goods of foreign make hurting our manufactures. But the real point is where does the high tariff help. It must be inefficient. A tariff for income on all competitive imports would at least prevent underselling and probably discourage a good part of the imports.

STOCK PRICES MOVE DOWN IN BOSTON

Share prices continued to work lower in late dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange today. Trading was at an active pace and losses for leaders ranged as high as 4 points. American Telephone was active and weak, sagging over 4 points. New England Telephone showe da loss of a point.

Edison Electric sold over a point below last nights close. Eastern Gas & Fuel preferred moved against the general trend and advanced 2 points while the prior preferred moved down more than a point.

Rail shares followed the line of least resistance and Atchison was down over 3 points and New Haven showed a loss of two points. Pennsylvania eased a minor fraction. Boston & Maine preferred gained a point.

First National Stores showed a loss of 2 points from its last quoted price. Anaconda Copper, Gillette and Brown & Co. preferred recorded losses of a point.

New England Gas preferred, Spencer Trask and Swith Internacional were firm and showed gains of a point or two. United Fruit and United Shoe were down slightly.

Dwight Manufacturing Company stockholders voted to accept offer of Nashua Manufacturing Company involving sale of Dwight's Somersworth (N. H.) plant and inventory, sheeting and pillow case business, for which Nashua is to pay $250,000, plus an additional sum for inventory and good orders transferred.

Sweets Co. Earnings Better in Quarter

New York, Oct. 21—Sweets Co. of America in the September quarter had a net income of $7375 after charges, taxes and depreciation equivalent to seven cents a share on 100,000 shares of common. This compares with a net income of $33,682, or 33 cents a share in the September quarter of 1931.

Net loss for the nine months was $15,022, as against a net income of $106,287, equal to $1.06 a share in the first nine months of the previous year.

September net income was $5207.

Large Surplus Is Aid to United Fruit

In reducing the book valuations of its properties to conform to deflated replacement costs United Fruit Co. is following the more progressive corporate practices of the times. Several major companies have taken the step within a year. The Fruit Company action is unique, however, in that the revaluation has been accomplished without altering capital stock and, thus, without seeking special vote of shareholders.

Ability to adjust valuations without tampering with capital was made possible by the large surplus.

Bond Offerings in Week Are Smaller

New bond offerings this week in the New York market totaled $8,435,000 against $15,190,500 a week ago and $20,625,00 a year ago.

SPECTATOR Says:

Action of the carriers continues the bright spot in the market, and if they can steam ahead they will carry the others along. So far the market shows complete lack of interest and is apparently waiting for an incentive. It may be that the steel industry will provide the needed stimulus. The cut in rail prices was taken as a sign here there are some good orders in the wind.

Pressure on Tobaccos

There is a growing suspicion that the pressure on the tobaccos which for the last three days has been timed to cut short rallying tendencies in the market, is coming from groups that would like to cover substantial lines of stocks.

A moderate speculative long interest is said to have been built up in the last few days.

This stock will be thrown out if the market doesn't do better soon.

Car Loadings

Forecasting substantial improvements in September railroad earnings over August, individual car loading reports show practically all major roads with traffic at a higher level than August and off less from a year ago. In four weeks ended October 8 total loadings of revenue freight were 2,306,947 cars, a weekly average of 576,737 and off 21.4 per cent from 1931 period. In four weeks ended August 27 total was 2,065,079, a weekly average of 516,270, off 30.9 per cent from 1931 period.

Word that Drug is very likely to maintain the $4 dividend at the next meeting made one group cover quite a line of stock.

Ontario & Western has been attracting some interest in the low-priced carrier group, especially since it is a coal road.

There are tips around to buy Consolidated Gas on dips. The yield at current levels is about 7 per cent, and the $4 dividend is apparently safe.

Telephone Earnings Show a Decrease

New York, Oct. 21—Gross earnings of 103 telephone companies as reported to the Interstate Commerce Commission in August were $82,690,471, against $94,788,267 in August last year. Operating income was $17,047,736, comparing with $22,089,960.

Total gross for the first eight months was $703,053,403, and operating income was $150,899,851, comparing respectively with $777,893,241 and $185,593,992 in the corresponding period of the preceding year.

STOCKS LOWER, WITH TRADING LESS ACTIVE

New York, Oct. 21—Pivotal shares in Wall Street dropped 1 to 5 points today before meeting a semblance of support. Trading became less active in the afternoon.

It was the sharpest setback in a fortnight, with selling hitting practically every group, though rails, steels and tobaccos showed special weakness.

LEADERS ALL LOWER

Extreme recessions saw issues off to 5 or more points including U. S. Steel, American Telephone, American Can, Consolidated Gas, United Aircraft, Eastman, Liggett and Myers "B", Case, Corn Products, Allied Chemical, Southern Pacific, Union Pacific and Atchison. Losses of 1 to 2 points appeared throughout the list.

The market was still largely a professional trading affair. Brokers reported considerable bearish activity. While steel quarters were inclined to look upon the cut in steel rail prices as a constructive move, it was apparently used as bearish ammunition in the market.

Bearishly inclined traders also mentioned the remarks of Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, who in an address in London said frankly that he could not clearly see a way to economic recovery.

Increases of one cent a gallon in gasoline prices in the Eastern states again attracted attention to the oil situation.

SLUMP SURPRISES

The slump in the market took many quarters in Wall Street by surprise, inasmuch as the recent action of the general list in resisting the downward tendency in the tobaccos had been accepted as a sign of underlying strength. Optimistically inclined brokers, however had been recommending buying only on reactions.

Inasmuch as Standards of New Jersey and Indiana had refused to follow other companies in boosting crude prices 12 cents a barrel in the mid-continent field, it was felt in some quarters that the firmer gasoline prices might pave the way for general acceptance of the increased crude schedules, although quarters close to Standard said the higher gasoline prices had no connection with the crude price situation.

There was fresh pressure on the tobaccos with a report in circulation that adverse rumors about this group were being circulated to enable bear interests to cover their short commitments. In every important division, except manufactured tobacco, the tobacco industry improved its position in September. Consumption of cigarettes, cigars and snuff showed smaller declines in September than for nine months. Cigarette consumption was 9,310,987,817, against 9,695,138,683 in September last year, off 384,150,866, or 3.9 per cent. For nine months consumption was off 10.12 per cent.

Although September cigarette consumption failed to extend the gain of 0.41 per cent over 1931 in August, the first increase in 14 months, the September drop was the smallest since May, 1931, with only two exceptions. In June, 1931, the loss was 2.06 per cent and in November, 1931, 1.28 per cent.

Women to Gain by 80% of Insurance Policies

By FRANK F. LOOMIS.

It is estimated that in 80 per cent of the life insurance policies now in force, women are named as the beneficiaries. And yet women are often stumbling blocks in planning an insurance program. However, it is only in ignorance of the value of live insurance when wives object to their husbands taking out a life insurance policy.

The average woman of today is well able to understand the functions of a life insurance policy if it were carefully explained to her, but few husbands bother to discuss this problem with their wives.

As long as protection remains the paramount feature of life insurance, the beneficiary, for whose benefit the protection is needed, plays an important part in the purchase of a policy and becomes a still more important factor in retaining the insurance in force. If a woman is aware that the policy has been definitely planned for her welfare, definitely arranged to meet her requirements, she will do everything to avoid letting the policy lapse.

A wife should be taught the value of a life insurance estate in the family's financial program; the many means by which it may be of service, and be fully advised as to the detailed provisions of the policy under which she is the beneficiary.

It would be wise for a man who is contemplating taking out some life insurance to discuss with his wife what type of policy will furnish the family the safest, most practical and the most enduring protection, and the manner in which the proceeds of the policy will be paid to her in the event of her husband's death. If she is consulted on this matter, the clever woman will undoubtedly realize that the safest plan is on a monthly income basis.

A life insurance estate left by the average man to be paid in a lump sum to his widow is subjected to many hazards and very often is gone in a few months. It is a difficult task for the average man to invest a large sum of money successfully, and asking a woman who is unaccustomed to handling money to take care of $50,000, $25,000 or even $10,000 so that it will yield her a lifelong income is giving her a great problem to face.

Just as soon as the proceeds of a life insurance policy are paid over to the beneficiary, she is approached with all sorts of get-rich-quick propositions. These investment schemes are usually represented as great opportunities, which must be taken advantage of immediately, and often the widow invests only to find as the years come that her life insurance estate has swiftly vanished.

CIGARETTE USE IS OFF LITTLE

New York, Oct. 21—Cigarette consumption in September fell 3.9 per cent below last year, but barring August, 1932, which showed a slight increase, and June and November, 1931, the loss was the smallest for the past 17 months.

Consumption for the month amounted to 9,310,987,817 cigarettes compared with 9,695,138,683 in September, 1931. For the entire first nine months of 1932, consumption was off 10.12 per cent.

In October, 1931, cigarette consumption dropped nearly 19 per cent from the preceding year, reversing the seasonal trend of recent years. It was said in tobacco trade quarters today that October consumption this year may compare more favorable with last year's figures than September because of the large distribution of cheaper cigarettes.

In every important division except manufactured tobacco, the industry showed a relatively improved position in September, according to the consumption figures. Cigars and snuff also showed smaller declines than for the full nine months. The September decrease in cigar consumption was 9.7 per cent from 1931.

Urges Deposits to Bring Reorganization

New York, Oct. 21—Cheney Brothers reorganization committee announces that all of the creditor banks and holders of over 90 per cent of the company's stock and over 50 per cent of its bonds have concurred in the proposed reorganization plan. The committee hopes to declare the plan effective prior to Nov. 1.

Dividends

The Kendall Co. declared regular quarterly dividend of $1.50 per share on preferred stock, series A, payable Dec. 1 to stock of record Nov. 10.

Beech-Nut Packing Co. declared regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents on the commoon, payable Jan. 2 to stock of record Dec. 12.

Rails No Longer Hold Transport Monopoly

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

New York, Oct. 21—Public regulation of the railroads is based on the assumption that they constitute a monopoly in transportation. This is no longer true since the rise of competitive trucks buses, canal boats, steamers, airplanes, and pipelines.

Unless the new status is recognized, numerous carriers will be driven into bankruptcy, and Government ownership will be inevitable if the service is to be performed.

Fred W. Sargent, lawyer by profession and president of the Chicago and North Western Railway Co., is one of the ablest spokesmen for the carriers.

"I agree with you," he said, in a message to this column, "that the apparent abatement of railroad baiting is of great significance and augurs well for the future stability of the railroads.

"There are many constructive things that could be done, and ought to be done, in the interest of owners of railroad securities and patrons of the railroads. Governor Roosevelt's discussion of the problem dealt with sound principles and it illustrates that he is in harmony with the present administration and others who have given the subject very intensive consideration.

"What we need now is to translate our investigations and studies and knowledge of the transportation problem into concrete action at the earliest possible date. Several things could be done by the next Congress that would re-establish the faith of investors in railroad securities and hasten materially the return of more prosperous conditions."

Outside Auditors Employed

New York, Oct. 21—Analysis of published reports for 1931 or 781 companies with stocks listed on New York Stock Exchange discloses financial statements of 651, or 83 per cent audited by independent public accounts, New York State Society of Certified Public Accountants reveals. There are 829 companies with shares listed on exchange. Analysis is taken to indicate secrecy is on wane in big corporations.

Stores Sales Much Improved

New York, Oct. 21 (AP)—Department store sales in the metropolitan district of New York declined 13.9 per cent from a year ago for the period between Oct. and 14, the Federal Reserve Bank reports. The decline during the first half of September was 17 per cent, the smallest since January; hence the October figures represent considerable improvement.

Heavy Construction Awards Big

New York, Oct. 21 (AP)—Large awards for highway, levee and railroad projects raised the total of heavy engineering construction contracts to $34,445,000 in the week ended Oct. 17, says Engineering News-Record. This figure was surpassed only three times this year and was more than double the previous week's volume. Private contracts were "much heavier" than usual, amounting to $6,700,000.

RETAIL TRADE GAINS HOLD

New York, Oct. 21 (AP)—The season's higher level of activity in wholesale and retail trade and certain light manufacturing lines has been maintained in the face of "political uncertainties," the weekly mercantile reviews said today.

"An encouraging amount of optimism," asserted Brandstreet's "continues in the reports from 55 leading cities. This sentiment appears to overbalance the natural uncertainty arising from the pending presidential election. But while this uncertainty is undoubtedly in the air, a definitely beneficial effect on the general morale caused by the recent seasonal gains in business continues to show itself. The reports show retailers making the best sales in men's and women's clothing. Millinery and shoes have also been largely featured, dry good wholesalers have been kept busy in many cases with fill-in orders."

Dun's reported that trade progress during the week "has seemed slow and expansion less extended, although previous gains have been held in most instances."

Current reports, continued this review, lack some of the hopeful exuberance of a month ago, many are tinged with hesitation because of the election, while others give evidence of some difficulty in gauging the outlook in view of the recent recession in commodity prices.

Virginia Iron Is Loser

New York, Oct. 21 (AP)—Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co. reports net loss of $52,585 for the first nine months, contrasted with profit of $55,317 in the same 1931 period.

Mister Starret!

(Campaign Leaflet)

"Mr. Starret, candidate for Congress in the 14th District, takes a keen interest in boys. One day of youth of fifteen called on Mr. Starret. The boy was looking for a job. While he was bright, he had been raised in the country and was without the veneer of the city. Mr. Starret sized him up. He took him into his private office. Mr. Starret tactfully suggested a different hair cut, a different tie, a coat with shoulders cut to fit etc. Soon we heard him pacing back and forth demonstrating a clean-cut, peppy walk. A few days later the youth was employed by one of the large banks."

CHINESE KIDNAP VICTIMS MADE SUICIDE PACT

By EDWARD HUNTER

(Copyright, 1932, by International News Service)

Newchwang, Manchuria, Oct. 21 (INS)—Seated in her father's house, Mrs. Kenneth Pawley related today the terrifying experiences she underwent at the hands of Chinese bandits who held her and Charles Corkran captive more than six weeks.

Mrs. Pawley and Corkran, British subjects, were treated "worse than dogs," constantly threatened with death and torture.

Mrs. Pawley revealed she and Corkran had made a suicide pact in case the bandits carried out their torture threats.

Mrs. Pawley told her story while her husband sat on one side of her and Corkran on the other. Her father, a missionary, and her mother sat opposite, thankful their daughter had returned.

The young woman said that on the long trek to the bandit camp after their capture she asked Pei Pa-Tien, bandit chief, if they would stop and allow her to rest her blistered feet.

"He answered in a violent torrent of obscene abuse," she said, "threatening to kill us.

"My knowledge of Chinese was a hindrance, as well as an aid, for I was forced to listen to obscenities while Mr. Corkran was happily ignorant of them.

"Finally, we were allowed to ride mules. Then our feet swelled so we had to cut off our riding boots.

"A series of nights in mud hovels followed. Our feet became infected, and yet we had no medicines.

"Mr. Corkran was wonderful in controlling his temper in the face of the Chinese abuse."

Corkran reciprocated, saying:

"Her courage was amazing. She never wept once."

Mohican Markets Hold Harvest Sale

This week at all Mohican Markets they are celebrating an old-fashioned festival. Stores are all in fall attire with displays of golden hued pumpkins and squash, prize-winning McIntosh apples, great clusters of blue and red grapes, pride of the farm cabbages, turnips and potatoes.

Every department is featuring specials for the harvest time shoppers. J. J. Ryan, superintendent of New England stores, expresses optimism about conditions.

CITY OF BOSTON

STATE ELECTION

City Clerk's office, October 21, 1932.

In accordance with the provisions of the laws concerning elections, notice is hereby given that meetings of the citizens of this city, qualified to vote for State officers, will be held in the several polling places designated for the purpose by the Board of Election Commissioners, on and all such citizens will on such date, in the several precincts in which they are entitled to vote, give in their votes for Presidential Electors, Governor, Lieutenant Governor, State Secretary, State Treasurer, State Auditor, Attorney-General, Representatives in Congress, Councillors, Senators in the General Court, Representatives in the General Court, Sheriff, Clerk of the Superior Court for Criminal Business for the County of Suffolk; also to give in their votes on the following questions:

Tuesday, the Eighth Day of November, 1932

QUESTION NO. 1
LAW PROPOSED BY INITIATIVE PETITION

Shall the proposed law which defines and legalizes the practice of chiropractic; establishes a board of registration of chiropractors and defines the number, mode of appointment, tenure, qualification and compensation of its members, and its powers and duties; provides for the preliminary qualifications, examination, certification, original registration and annual license of chiropractors and regulation of their practice, and defines the mode, subjects of and fees for examination, the mode of practice and penalties; and other matters related thereto, which are chiefly as follows:

That chiropractic be "the science or practice of locating and adjusting by hand the malpositions of the articulations of the human spine."

That any person, with one preceding year's residence in this Commonwealth and with degree from a qualified chiropractic school received at least one year prior to the date when this law takes effect, may, within ninety days after such date, be certified by the board at its discretion without examination.

That otherwise no person, except a member of the board of registration, shall practice chiropractic unless, being over twenty-one years of age, of good moral character and graduated from a reputable chiropractic school after personally attending courses of at least twenty-two hundred sixty-minute daylight hours given to persons qualified to graduate from a public high school, he shall qualify by examination, pay a fee of twenty-five dollars and be registered and certified; except that any person licensed in another State maintaining standards equal to those of this Commonwealth may be registered without examination.

That the examination be scientific and practical in character, in subjects including anatomy, physiology, symptomatology, hygiene, sanitation, chemistry, histology, pathology, chiropractic analysis, and the principles and practice of chiropractic.

That the board may, after hearing, revoke a certificate for cause.

That the board shall make an annual report and shall keep public records of its proceedings and of the names of persons examined or registered by it and of the names and addresses of all registered chiropractors, who shall pay an annual license fee, promptly notify the board of any change in address and furnish such other information as the board may require.

That the board consist of three members, residents of the Commonwealth for three years, graduates of a chartered chiropractic school having power to confer degrees in chiropractic, to be appointed by the Governor, with the advice and consent of the council, for a term of three years.

That the board have authority to administer oaths, summon witnesses and take testimony and adopt reasonable rules and regulations pertaining to their duties, and that they pay into the state treasury fees received by them, and that they receive compensation and reimbursement for expenses in such amounts as may be annually appropriated therefor not exceeding the amount of such fees.

Penalties are provided for practicing chiropractic without holding a certificate or for using the words "Chiropractic Practitioner," the letters "D. C." or any title or letters indicating engagement in such practice, or for buying, selling or fraudulently obtaining any diploma or record of registration.

It is further provided that the present law relating to the registration of physicians and surgeons and providing penalties for the unauthorized practice of medicine shall not be held to discriminate against registered chiropractors; but no chiropractor, unless registered as a physician or surgeon, may practice obstetrics, or administer drugs, or perform surgical operations by the use of instruments or hold himself out as and for other than a chiropractor, which was disapproved in the House of Representatives by a vote of 80 in the affirmative and 151 in the negative and in the Senate by a vote of 13 in the affirmative and 21 in the negative, be approved?

QUESTION NO. 2
LAW PROPOSED BY INITIATIVE PETITION

Shall the proposed law which provides for an additional method of nominating candidates for nomination, at the State primaries in September, by members of political parties, for those offices to be filled by all the voters of the Commonwealth at a state election.

It provides that the state conventions of the political parties, in each state election year, shall be held before and not after the state primaries, as now, namely, not later than June 15. In order to elect delegates to such party conventions, party primaries are established to be held on the last Tuesday in April. Among other things, these state conventions may endorse candidates for offices to be filled by all the voters and to be voted upon at the state primaries. Such endorsement places a candidate in nomination, at such state primaries, without the necessity of filing nomination papers. The name of the endorsed candidate is to be placed first on the ballot and against his name is to be placed the words "Endorsed by (the name of political party) convention" in addition to the eight-word statement now authorized by law. Candidates endorsed by a party convention may accept said endorsement within ten days, and having so accepted may not withdraw.

It also provides for the election of district members of state committees and members of ward and town committees at the proposed party primaries in April, as well as delegates to the state party conventions, instead of at the state primaries in September, as now.

It also provides for the election of delegates to national conventions (to nominate candidates for President) at the proposed party primaries instead of at the primaries, now specially held for that purpose, and which existing law requires to be held on the last Tuesday in April (the same day proposed for the proposed party primaries).

It also provides for certain other new provisions of law and certain changes in existing laws, relating to holding state conventions and party primaries, the number and election of delegates to state conventions, the number and members at large of a state committee, and other matters, which in more detail chiefly are as follows:

State conventions are to be composed solely of delegates elected at the party primaries, and the number is to be one from each ward and town and one additional for every fifteen hundred votes or major fraction thereof above the first fifteen hundred votes cast at the preceding state election in such ward or town for the political party candidate for Governor, instead of a number now fixed by the state committee of each party (not less than one from each ward or town) and certain members designated by existing law.

The time for notice to the State Secretary by aldermen or selectmen of their determination to hold primaries by wards, precincts or groups of precincts, to be March 1, instead of August 1, as now.

The names of candidates for election for delegates to a state convention and for district members of a state committee to be arranged individually by alphabet instead of in groups arranged by lot, as now.

Vacancies in the office of delegate to a state or national convention not to be filled except in case of a tie vote, and then by delegates from the same district, within ten days, and if no other delegate or if not so filled, then by a state committee, rather than solely by the remaining members of the delegation; and statement of filling of such vacancy to be filed with the State Secretary.

Seating of delegates at state conventions to be in groups by senatorial districts, and order of business at said conventions defined.

Voting on candidates, by a convention, to be by roll call, if more than one candidate for the office, or by groups of delegates unless any member of such group objects.

The number of members at large of a state committee of a political party to be fixed by the state convention of a party instead of by the state committee, as now.

The existing provisions as to preparation and filing of nomination papers, objections to nominations, preparation number, substance, arrangement and form of ballots, hours during which polls shall be open, opening of ballot boxes, canvass and return of votes, return and certification of votes, now applicable to state primaries to be applicable to the proposed party primaries.

The power of a state committee to fix the number of district delegates to a national convention to be continued, but the date, of giving notice to the State Secretary, of such fixation to be March 1, instead of on or before the third Wednesday in March, as now.

The power of city and town committees to fix the number of members of ward and town committees to be continued, but the date, of giving notice to the State Secretary, of such fixation to be March 1 instead of August 1, as now which was approved in the Senate by a vote of 21 in the affirmative and 17 in the negative and was disapproved in the House of Representatives by a vote of 62 in the affirmative and 138 in the negative, be approved?

QUESTION NO. 3
PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES

Is it desirable that the proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States,—

"ARTICLE—

"SECTION 1. The terms of the President and Vice President shall end at noon on the 20th day of January, and the terms of Senators and Representatives at noon on the 3d day of January, of the years in which such terms would have ended if this article had not been ratified; and the terms of their successors shall then begin.

"SEC. 2. The Congress shall assemble at least once in every year, and such meeting shall begin at noon on the 3d day of January, unless they shall by law appoint a different day.

"SEC. 3. If, at the time fixed for the beginning of the term of the President, the President elect shall have died, the Vice President elect shall become President. If a President shall not have been chosen before the time fixed for the beginning of his term, or if the President elect shall have failed to qualify, then the Vice President elect shall act as President until a President shall have qualified; and the Congress may by law provide for the case wherein neither a President elect nor a Vice President elect shall have qualified, declaring who shall then act as President, or the manner in which one who is to act shall be selected, and such person shall act accordingly until a President or Vice President shall have qualified.

"SEC. 4. The Congress may by law provide for the case of the death of any of the persons from whom the House of Representatives may choose a President whenever the right of choice shall have devolved upon them, and for the case of the death of any of the persons from whom the Senate may choose a Vice President whenever the right of choice shall have devolved upon them.

"SEC. 5. Sections 1 and 2 shall take effect on the 15th day of October following the ratification of this article.

"SEC. 6. This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States within seven years from the date of its submission."—be ratified by the General Court?

IN BOARD OF STREET COMMISSIONERS OF THE CITY OF BOSTON
October 20, 1932.

ORDERED: That due notice be given, that this Board is of the opinion that, in said city, public improvements should be made, consisting of:

The laying out and construction of Huntington avenue, West Roxbury district, as a highway, from Navarre street to Ramsdell avenue, with the name of Clare street or some other distinctive name;

The laying out and construction of Holborn Terrace, Roxbury district, as a highway, from Holborn street southwesterly;

The laying out and construction of an extension of Colborne road, Brighton district, as a highway, over and including the private way known as Colonial road and over the easterly end of Blenford road;

The laying out and construction of an extension of Wilmington avenue, Dorchester district, as a highway, from Milton avenue to Gallivan Boulevard;

The discontinuance of a part of Milton street, Dorchester district, as a highway, westerly from Hallet Davis street for a distance of approximately two hundred and forty-six feet;

Substantially as shown on plans in the office of this Board, that it intends to pass orders for making said improvements, and that it appoints 11 o'clock A. M., of November 2, 1932, and the office of this Board, 401 City Hall Annex, as the time and place for public hearings in the matters.

A true copy of an order passed by said Board on said day.

Garner's Plain Words Refute Hoover Claims of Fiscal 'Leadership'

If John N. Garner makes no other contribution to the campaign than his speech of last week, which was broadcast throughout the country, he has contributed certainly more than his share to the oncoming Democratic victory.

In plain and direct terms, with complete fairness of statement, he subjected the Hoover Administration to the most withering analysis and damaging criticism it has received from any quarter.

It was perhaps natural for Mr. Garner to refer to the calumny which the Republican partisan press has been so diligently circulating that he is "a dangerous radical."

By those who know his life as a successful business man and his long legislative experience as the representative of a conservative community, the charge of radicalism has been promptly put down to Republican campaign tactics.

Mr. Garner's record as a member of the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives, and his important part in the solution of EVERY FISCAL PROBLEM which has been presented to that all-important committee, have long ago established his character as a sane and responsible figure in the nation's life.

His elevation to the Speakership of the House of Representatives was one of the greatest testimonials which an American can receive. IT IS AN HONOR THAT MUST BE EARNED. It is conferred by the elected representatives of the whole people upon a man who has labored in constant and intimate association with the membership of the House.

It is never bestowed out of favoritism. Its award is never a fluke.

When the Speaker of the House of Representatives ventures to review the failures of the Administration, he speaks out of full knowledge and his words carry weight.

"My contention," said Mr. Garner, "is that the present Administration in Washington has neither been efficient in its performance nor frank in its explanations. The Administration has told you that the depression came from abroad. Let us see if it did."

With this introduction he proceeded to cite facts and specifications:

"Our export business is less than eight per cent of our total business and the par value of foreign loans eight per cent of our wealth. Say we have lost half of all this foreign stake, or four per cent of wealth and business. Does that account for the forty to fifty per cent loss of both? Two million people were employed in production for export. Half of them are out of work. Does that explain our ten million to twelve million unemployed?"

These are facts which Mr. Hoover in his Cleveland speech saw fit to disregard. They make his plaintive alibi very flimsy and unconvincing that all our troubles are of foreign origin.

"No," says Speaker Garner, "the depression DID NOT come from Europe. It came from our own folly and illusions, not the least of which was that prosperity was so great that poverty (quoting President Hoover's sorry boast) would soon be abolished."

Referring to the President's claim that he has an EXCLUSIVE PERSONAL PROGRAM now to TEMPER DISASTER, Mr. Garner effectively cited the fact that in 1921 Mr. Hoover had an equally exclusive program to INSURE PROSPERITY.

He quoted at random from the President's utterances:

"The most urgent economic problem is in agriculture—We have pledged ourselves to find the solution—Foreign trade can prosper only under sound financial policies—Taxes and expenditures of public monies have come to bear a vital part in business stability—Errors in that delicate adjustment can cause us fabulous losses.

"We have led the world in substituting machines for hand labor—This enables us to produce goods much in excess of our needs—To insure continuous employment we must find a profitable market for these surpluses—We must sell more products abroad if we would have steady and assured employment for labor in our industries—It is an essential part of the sound expansion of our foreign trade that we should interest ourselves in the development of backward and crippled countries by means of loans."

With telling bluntness, Mr. Garner declared that every element of the Hoover proposals was an error and every error brought disaster:

"Financing loans to crippled countries was folly. Increasing tariffs destroyed foreign trade and made debt payments impossible. Errors in the delicate balancing of taxes and spending DID cause fabulous losses and upset the stability of business."

To many persons the persistence of the depression and its gravity are regarded as mysterious and inexplicable.

Speaker Garner has put his finger upon the explanation and has dispelled whatever mystery shrouds its causes.

THE PANIC IS DUE TO THE INCONSISTENT AND IMPROVIDENT POLICIES OF THE HOOVER ADMINISTRATION AND TO ITS UTTERLY UNSOUND FISCAL METHODS.

NO ALIBI, HOWEVER PLAINTIVE OR IMPASSIONED, CAN OBSCURE THIS FACT.

People ARE Interested

When the smug politician tells you the people aren't interested in politics, point to the registration figures.

It is estimated that 1,800,000 men and women were registered in the drive which closed on Wednesday night.

This is in excess of the record-breaking registration achieved by herculean effort in the Presidential election of 1928.

Governor Ely, Mayor Curley and officials in both political parties thank the Boston Evening American "for your splendid efforts in stimulating the people of Massachusetts to the performance of their duty as citizens."

It was an easy task, we are glad to say. The people ARE interested. As they will show clearly on Election Day.

Protect Your Dog Pal

An expert says most dogs are near-sighted; that is why so many are killed beneath autos in the city streets.

You know the spectacle—the crunch of brakes, an agonizing cry, a small crowd, something lifeless and revolting pushed into the gutter, and the crowd moves on; just the end of another dog story.

In Java, where cats abound as household pets, the superstition persists that cats pray for their owners. In his affection for his master, the dog must do at least that much. Keep him off the streets. Buy a leash. Don't let him run alone.

Making It Up

Now comes the ancient bugaboos
That trembling politicians use.
They chant the old Election Blues
In fevered desperation.
They brew concoctions dark and queer,
A broth of panic, doubt and fear,
Of dread and consternation.

With all the bunk at his command,
Old G. O. P. with cunning hand
Is splashing gloom about the land
To make a reign of terror.
Although it worked in days of yore
It doesn't fool 'em any more,
And this will be the final score:
No runs. No hits. ONE ERROR.

Day by Day in Europe

Birthplace of Pepys

LONDON, Oct. 21—In a sudden turning this morning off Fleet street—and how serene in contrast to the journalistic jumble of old Park Row—I came accidentally upon Salisbury Court. Here, over the White Horse Tavern, crumbling under a gnarled tree, was a tablet commemorating the birthplace of Samuel Pepys.

Pepys was the most interesting Londoner of the 17th century, in which he flowered. His diary in secret shorthand, never intended for others to read, is pre-eminent as the most fascinating record of any stretch of British history. Without peruke, Pepys was a ringer for Edward G. Robinson, the movie star.

More than any other person, he reacted to life's inconsequentials with a piping bravado. He lived by the minute, as wise men do, his active mind open, alert, responding. He drank "incomparably good claret," fondled books, intrigued and "ogled the fine wenches." Almost everything was something "pretty to see."

A little later I rode to Buckingham street, where he also lived, and tried to find his house, but failed. From an enormously fat woman occupying a doorway, I inquired the location. She pursed her lips, assumed a photographic smile and replied: "He ain't livin' on this strite, sir, as far as I know of."

But she pointed to a corner where "Peter the Grite" lodged and still another that housed Jean Jacques Rousseau. But it was apparent she never heard of Pepys, although I tried three pronunciations—Peps, Pepsis and Peeps. But after all Samuel never expected such fame.

Gertrude Lawrence bowled by today in an open motor on Regent street today. I stepped to the curb and lifted a pearl-gray hat as passersby, recognizing her, stopped to pivot. But her affable smile held no recognition. A half block away she seemed to remember and waved frantically, but I was already feeling like the only man walking through a telephone exchange.

* * *

London, gray and devoid of detail, seems a silhouette of smoke. One of the most romantic cities, it is, geographically and climatically, the most unromantic. More than anything, it is a symbol. Near the mottle of black and white of that noble network of austerity, the War Office on Whitehall, I saw a platoon of scarlet guardsmen and I thought of Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and India. Great Colonies all—springing in glory from London soil!

* * *

Perhaps the Britisher's cleave for London was best expressed by Christopher Morley, who wrote: "In moments of intuition, London's very stones and mortar seem sentient, stained with the pathos of life; her smile-and-weeping weather a necessity of her truth."

* * *

Despite the increasing influx of Americans, London hotels never grasp the Yankee version of ice water. I phoned a room waiter for some. He brought a pitcher on a silver tray and beside it a plate holding an apple-sized chunk of ice. I demanded more ice and he returned with another piece on a separate plate. Sneeringly I inquired: "What does one do around here to get ice water?" He replied affably: "Just send for me, sir." So I gave up.

* * *

Nothing is more expressive of the fecund multiplicities of window-dressing genius than a Lyon's window. American delicatessen displays catch the eye but do not whip up hunger. Here they touch off a positive drool. I idled in the savory exhale of a Lyon's today, brushing my mouth on my sleeve at intervals, gazing at thinly sliced water cress sandwiches flecked with mustard, orange marmalade, Dundee cakes, gingerbread, sausage rolls, egg pies, jellied veal—I can't go on without whimpering.

* * *

I try to master left-hand traffic by rippling through clumsy swarms of motors in the manner of a darting otter. My formula is about like this: I gaze up and down the roadway, close my eyes and make for the chin-strapped Bobby in the center. Once I just made it by a whisker and the Bobby buzzed: "A nip, sy squeak, sir!" But if they ever painard me in the pistol-pocket, there'll be no nippy squeak. What London will hear is a good old-fashioned out-doorgey bellow.

Listen, World!
By Elsie Robinson

Love Is Life Reaching Out

EVER SINCE you began to grow up, you've been thinking about love. Dreaming about it. Longing for it. Thinking of the day when love would come to you. Waiting for that day; counting on it; feeling that it would settle everything.

But it never was, was it?

Yes, you've been "in love." More than once, maybe. But, somehow, it never turned out as you thought it would. Ecstasy, at first. Ecstasy that lasted a few days, a few months. Then it fizzled out, and you were as lonely and bewildered as when you started.

Elsie Robinson

So, of course, you concluded that love had failed because it wasn't the right love. If you had found the right love, then everything would have been well. The ecstacy would have lasted forever, and you wouldn't have become bored and resentful.

That's what you thought, wasn't it? That's what we all think. But we're wrong. Love doesn't come that way.

Love doesn't come from outside. It isn't a mysterious visitation nor a magical combination that can occur only when we meet the perfect partner.

Love comes from inside. We don't "fall in love." We release love. We release something that has been gradually forming in us, since we were born.

Ever since we were born, life has been moving restlessly in us, reaching out—reaching out for more power, and pride, and pleasure, and peace.

Love is life's reaching-out for someone to comfort its loneliness, share its tenderness, flatter its vanity, help its weakness, excuse its faults, lighten its boredom, cool its fire.

Love is the life in you, reaching out.

Why does love seem to fail us? Why does no lover ever satisfy us?

That is why. Because love is life. And life is always restless, always unsatisfied, always reaching out.

So do not blame the one you love for that. He or she is as bewildered as you are, as hungry, incomplete.

But that is not a tragedy. That is the glorious, the worth-while thing about life!

Thank God for life's restlessness! Thank God that love never stands still; and that there are always new hungers in you, and fresh dreams.

Do not ask to stand still. Do not expect to be satisfied. Dare to want more. Dare to reach out. Dare to live; even though life can never be complete. Dare to love; even though love can never be perfect.

Need

All splendid was the work he did
When hunger at his elbow sat,
But now from every suffering rid
His canvases seem stale and flat.

When in an attic room alone
He labored painfully and slow,
Chilled to the marrow of the bone,
His colors had a richer glow.

But fame at last has found him out,
And wealth has comforted his pain,
And now although his limbs are stout
No further goal will he attain.

A critic at his canvas looks
And has this wisdom to impart:
'Tis hunger writes the finest books
And suffering spurs creative art.

Capital Silhouettes

SENATOR BINGHAM'S scheme to raise funds by charging Washington motorists a cent a minute for parking in the public streets doesn't go far enough. Let's charge Senators a cent a minute for every speech they make, and solve the nation's problem of how to care for the destitute millions.

OF COURSE the Senate couldn't raise as much under this system as it could have in the old days when Tom Heflin was a member in good, not to say constant, standing.

SAM INSULL is reported to be very much alarmed over the possibility that kidnapers might get him, which only goes to prove that the only racket any man is in favor of is his own.

WHERE MR. HOOVER made his great mistake in 1928 was in not laying a foundation for his 1932 alibi by claiming that American prosperity was world-wide and due to conditions growing out of the Great War.

* * *

YES, as President Hoover so sapiently remarks, things could, indeed, be worse. For instance, we might have four more years of Hooverism staring us all in the face, instead of four and a half more months.

When Discretion's the Better Part of Valor
By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Boston Evening American.

WITH ALL THE POLLS indicating a Roosevelt sweep, the Hoover forces, driven to despair by the approach of pay-day, are now resorting to desperate devices, all of which are vicious and some of which, in most States, are criminal. We have before us the names of two concerns in Chicago that are threatening their employes with dismissal unless Hoover is elected. There is just one place for employers of this type, and that is the penitentiary.

More vicious, because dangerous to the nation, is the plan to convince the people that the election of Mr. Roosevelt will mean the abandonment of the gold standard. Secretary Hurley, whose dinner engagement with the American Legion in Colorado has been cancelled because of his use of tanks, bayonets and gas against a hungry, ragged army in Washington, has just made that astonishing assertion.

Mr. Hoover's speech to the effect that in February we were within two weeks of going off the gold standard until he, solitary and alone, saved it, set the pace. That claim has been demonstrated to have been recklessly false by financial writers and bankers; it brought the market down here and the dollar down in Europe; and did more to destroy confidence than anything thus far said or done. The Hurley statement is an even cheaper piece of demagogy.

Publicly Denounced as a Lie

It was Secretary Hurley's assistant in the War Department who recently in a criminal libel of Mr. Roosevelt in a charge that many years ago a firm with which he was associated had indulged in disreputable business in a stock transaction. The attorney at the time, announcing that he is a Republican who will vote for Hoover, has publicly denounced this as a lie in a full statement of what occurred.

Mr. Hoover has not rebuked the member of his official household for giving circulation to that libel. If it is the desire of Mr. Hoover to enter into the private business careers of the Presidential candidates he will open a field that is not without its richness. Senator Norris has just quoted from some of Mr. Hoover's writings for the Mining Magazine, of May, 1912, to illustrate his concept of business ethics.

100,000 Workingmen and Never Had a Strike

In his speech at Cleveland, Mr. Hoover charged that the Democratic National Committee had given it out that he had been an importer of Chinese coolie labor for his mines in South Africa. And the committee did nothing of the sort. But in his speech the candidate impressively pounded the table and asserted that no company of his had ever imported coolie labor.

We have said in these columns that he did employ coolie labor, but we had the Chinese mines in mind. Four years ago he made the boast that he had employed 100,000 men and never had a strike. That was a fair assertion, if true. In that it would illustrate his attitude toward labor.

It is just as fair to inquire as to the character of this army of workingmen. Some years ago, when Republican leaders were making scathing attacks on Mr. Hoover than have ever been made by his political opponents, Senator Willis asked the question:

"What American workingman did he employ?"

And Senator Norris has just commented on that question:

"This question so far as I know has never been answered, and it seems to me that the American people have a right to have the question completely answered."

Memory May Be at Fault

Assuredly it has the right if a point is to be made that he employed 100,000 workingmen and never had a strike.

Had he not made such a point of denying that his firm had ever imported coolie labor and coupled his denial with a nasty attack on Democrats, it might well be passed in silence. But there are documents available to the public that indicate that his memory may be at fault.

As early as 1898, in referring to the high cost of mining in Australia, he wrote an article published in the Engineering and Mining Journal of December 17, 1898, page 626, in which he said:

"The directions from which changes should come in order to lower the working costs is the . . . removal of restrictions on Asiatic labor."

This magazine article may be read in Room 18 of the Astor Library, in New York City.

The Importing of Chinese Coolies

And Mr. Hoover's firm did make a business of importing Chinese coolies to South Africa. He was a director of the Chinese Engineering & Mining Company from 1903 to 1912. In the Daily Consular and Trade Reports of the Department of Commerce and Labor of the United States of January 3, 1906, is set forth a report from American Consul-General Ragsdale, of Tientsin, on the system that had been established with the consent of the Chinese Government for the transportation of coolie labor to the Transvaal. In this official report, page three, we read that:

"Contracts for this work were given to two British firms in Tientsin—William R. Forbes & Co. and the Chinese Engineering & Mining Company."

Thus it appears, from the record, that while Mr. Hoover was a director, his company did have the contract for transporting coolie labor to the Transvaal.

At a meeting of the Chinese Engineering & Mining Company, Sept. 13, 1904, the presiding officer reported on the "advantages offered by the port of Ching-wan-tao in connection with the shipping of coolies from North China to the Transvaal"; and Mr. Moreing of the company said:

"Although I say I was the originator of the enterprise, I know that the shareholders and directors owe a great debt of gratitude to two men in bringing this business to a successful issue, namely, my partner, Mr. Hoover and Mr. De Wouters of Brussels."

It was at this very time that the importation of coolies became an acrimonious subject of partisan discussion in Parliament, and Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the Liberal leader, said in debate:

"This policy was an outrage upon the white man of the Transvaal who, under the sham and bastard form of self-government that had been extemporized, had not been able to make their own views known. Certainly I said, and I shall say it again, that in many of its features it is indistinguishable from slavery."

No Place in the Campaign

So much for that. There is very much more in articles signed by Mr. Hoover which we prefer to pass in silence.

But it appears that Mr. Hoover's savage attack on his political opponents, as far as party organization is concerned, was entirely out of place, and that his memory is defective.

And the moral is that Mr. Hoover's Board of Strategy will do well to abandon the field of personal attack on the business integrity of political opponents. It has no place in the campaign. The libelous attack on Mr. Roosevelt by a member of Mr. Hoover's Cabinet dragged in this phase. But if that is the plan of campaign, it certainly will be met—and that will not contribute to the dignity of the campaign, nor to the advantage of Mr. Hoover.

American's Home College

Questions and answers prepared by members of the faculty of the College of the City of New York outline what they consider a well-educated person ought to know.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Does Engineering present a field for women?

This question will be repeated and answered tomorrow by Prof. J. Charles Rathburyn, Dept. of Civil Engineering.

YESTERDAY'S QUESTION

Who was John Stuart Mill?

By MYRON L. HOCH, Department of Economics.

John Stuart Mill was born in 1806, the son of James Mill, the distinguished economist. The system of education which his father had planned for him was extraordinary. It might have proved fatal if practised on an intellect less powerful than that of John Stuart Mill.

At the age of ten he was already well versed in universal history; at thirteen he had a fair knowledge of sciences and philosophy and had written a history of Rome. By the time he was fourteen he knew all the political history there was to be known at that time. In 1820, then a young man of twenty-three, he published his first essays on political economy.

In 1843 there appeared his well-known system of Logic, which immediately established his fame. Five years later the remarkable "Principles of Political Economy" was published. Mill was in the service of the East India Company up to the time when it lost its charter in 1858.

From 1865-68 he was a member of the House of Commons. He spent the remaining years of his life, except three taken up with his Parliamentary work, at Avignon, where his wife lay buried.
